U. S. Failure To Halt Bank Loan in Cuba Faces Probe

Senate Group to Scan State Department's Official Records.

Letter From Hull Offers Assistance

Pecora Says 80 Million Flotation by Chase Not Questioned.

The Senate Banking Committee late yesterday decided to send investigators into the State Department to examine official correspondence on the Chase National Bank's flotation of $80,000,000 in Cuban loans.

Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher announced the decision following receipt of a letter from Secretary of State Hull, offering to make all records available to anyone the committee might designate.

Announcement came at a hearing marked by charges of "big graft" in former President Machado's cabinet, in connection with public works projects.

Start Next Week.

Committee agents will begin next week to investigate why the State Department failed to hold the financing in violation of the Platt amendment of the Cuban constitution, which prohibits setting aside any but "ordinary revenues" for financing loans. The loans were made in a five-year period extending from 1926.

The committee concluded testimony on the Cuban loans amidst a flourish of last-minute disclosures by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel.

Developments were:

Sumner Welles, Ambassador to Cuba, was shown to have conferred with Chase Bank officials who provided him with "quite a bit of background" on the Cuban financial position, and advised their Havana representatives to get "on a confidential basis" with him. They described him as "standoffish," and warned he might be "somewhat difficult to get on an entirely satisfactory basis with."

Letter Withheld.

The committee agreed to withhold from the record part of a letter from the Havana Branch of Chase to New York headquarters, which Pecora said "might cause acts of violence in Cuba." The entire substance of another letter was held from the record for "political reasons," a member said.

From it was learned the first reference attributed Communist leanings to a revolutionary organization and certain student groups. The second letter made reference to Ambassador Welles, Assistant Secretary of State Jefferson Caffery and former President Machado.

Members of the Machado cabinet were charged with "graft" in connection with a public works project, by James Bruce, a former vice-president of Chase, in a letter read into the record.

Officials "Rubber Stamps."

Bruce said all members of the cabinet with the exception of Secretary Cespedes were "rubber stamps" for Machado. He advised the bank not to make "any advance of any sort to the government unless we are entirely in control of their future financial program."

Emerick B. Freed, United States attorney for Cleveland, yesterday conferred with Pecora, on the committee's impending investigation of the closed bank situation in Detroit and Cleveland. Freed, who has been investigating the Cleve-

5 U. S. Citizens Freed in Spain

Acquitted of Attacking Guard in Palma, Mallorca.

Palma, Mallorca, Oct. 26 (AP).—Five Americans on trial here charged with assaulting a civil guard were acquitted today following a five-hour secret session of the military court.

Findings of the tribunal must be confirmed by a military auditor, but this is seen as a mere formality.

Prison terms of six years and a day each had been asked by the prosecutor for each of the five Americans. He explained this heavy punishment was asked because the offense was an attack against the armed forces of Spain.

Three members of the tribunal held out for four hours at today's hearing for a long-term sentence.

Those on trial were Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood, of West Springfield, Mass.; Rutherford Fullerton, of Columbus, Ohio; Roderick F. Mead, of New York, and Edmund W. Blodgett, of Stamford, Conn.

The hearing was held in the infantry barracks and the courtroom was crowded with members of the British and American colonies.

Charges against the five were based on an alleged attack on a civil guard during a disturbance in a hotel.

Alimony Row Jails Barclay

Divorced Mate Charges Plan to Evade Payment by Leaving U. S.

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 26 (U.P.). McClelland Barclay, nationally prominent artist, was in the Fairfield County jail tonight because his former wife, Nan, believes he intends fleeing the United States forever to escape paying alimony to her.

It was the second time in four days that Barclay had been arrested. He was taken in custody Monday on a warrant sworn out by the first Mrs. Barclay, who charges he owes $40,000 alimony.

The writ, served on Barclay in bed, demands the artist post $35,000 bail as a guarantee that he will not leave the country.

Barclay appeared at the courthouse for a hearing at 5 p. m., on reduction of bond. Judge Frederick Peasley refused and sent the artist back to his cell. It was considered likely that Barclay would spend the night in jail.

Mrs. Barclay, former Washington society woman, charges her former husband has threatened to make his home abroad.

Pair in Frat House Blaze Found Guilty

Smith, Former President, Parlton, Pledge, Face 1 to 10 Years.

Discarding the alibi defense offered by H. Albert Smith and Edward J. Parlton, a jury in the court of Justice Peyton Gordon last night found both guilty of arson in connection with a blaze in the Sigma Chi fraternity house last July.

Both accepted the verdict calmly. They shook hands with several acquaintances and were then taken to the prison van, in which they were driven to the District Jail. Both had been at liberty on bond, but Justice Gordon ordered them committed pending disposition of a motion for a new trial.

Smith, 26, former president of the fraternity, and Parlton, 22, a pledge, were accused of starting two fires early the morning of July 9. One was in the vestibule of the first floor and spread to the upper floors. The other started in a desk drawer in an attic room.

17 Asleep in Rooms.

Seventeen members of the frat were asleep in their rooms at the time. Firemen had difficulty in rescuing several who were unable to get down the blaze-lined stairway and were clinging by their finger tips to window ledges.

Immediate investigation by fire inspectors, and the discovery of a partially filled 10-gallon can of gasoline convinced authorities the blazes were of incendiary origin. Suspicion finally centered on Smith and Parlton, and after the can had

Grove Sold To Red Sox In Cash Deal

Confirmation Due Soon in Sale of Athletic Star to Boston Club.

Boston, Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, superstar of the Philadelphia Athletics' pitching staff, has been sold to the Boston Red Sox in a deal calculated to rock the baseball world when official announcement is made within the next few weeks.

Negotiations for the transfer of baseball's most valuable chattel from the Philadelphia club to the lowly Boston team have already been consummated despite the lack of announcement of the deal by the two clubs. Confirmation is expected after the peak of the football season, when the deal may have the fullest publicity.

Details of the trade thus far are lacking, but it is assumed that the deal is an outright purchase for cash by the Boston club, with reports that Max Bishop, veteran infielder, and another pitcher will be included by Manager Connie Mack in the shipment to Boston for a cash return estimated at $200,000.

Gate Receipts Decline.

The pinch of declining gate receipts of the Philadelphia club and the ambitious rebuilding plans of the Red Sox, backed by the millions of Owner Tom Yawkey, brought about the most important trade of the decade in big league baseball.

Owner Yawkey's determination to place a winning team in Boston was expressed near the finish of the 1933 season coincident with his an-

Indiana Orders Out Militia To Trap Escaped Convicts

Indianapolis, Oct. 26 (AP).—The State decided today to use its own trigger men in an attempt to trip up the convict gang roving Indiana and Ohio since the Michigan City Prison break a month ago.

Adjt. Gen. Elmer F. Straub ordered into service 70 officers and 360 men of the Indiana Guard, selecting for duty men with expert marksmanship ratings.

A plan for using the guardsmen was evolved by Al Feeney, State safety director, and approved by Gov. Paul V. McNutt. The troops will be stationed at 44 strategic centers under a captain.

To prevent any controversy over their authority, it was arranged that the guardsmen be sworn in as deputy sheriffs. At their disposal will be the machine guns, rifles, side arms and tear gas equipment of the guard units.

The decision to use National Guardsmen in the bandit hunt followed closely the entrance of Federal Department of Justice agents into the search.

Feeney decided to defer acceptance of Indiana American Legionnaires to form a "shotgun army." V. M. Armstrong, department commander, appointed a committee to study methods whereby Legionnaires could aid in the chase.

The State police continued a relentless search for the gang, which they believe consists of at least 13 desperate men bound by oath never to be captured alive.

The eight felons still at large after the prison break of September 26 have been joined by other former prisoners, Capt. Leach declared. Among the additions Capt. Leach lists Dillinger, who was liberated October 12 from the Limo (Ohio) Jail by a gang that shot and killed Sheriff Jess Sarber.

Harry Pierpont, one of the escaped felons and identified by Lima officers as a member of the gang that freed Dillinger, is believed to have assumed leadership of the convicts.

New Cabinet Completed By Sarraut

Daladier Is Minister of War; Bonnet Given Finance Post.

Paul-Boncour Succeeds Himself as Chief of Foreign Office.

Paris, Oct. 27 (Friday) (AP).—Premier Albert Sarraut early today announced formation of a new ministry for France which varied little from the cabinet of former Premier Daladier.

With himself as premier and minister of marine, he chose former Premier Daladier as minister of war, and Joseph Paul-Boncour to succeed himself as minister of foreign affairs.

Georges Bonnet was chosen to hold his former position as minister of finance. The other ministries were announced as follows:

Many Hold Same Posts.

Minister of the Budget—Abel Gardey.

War—Guy la Chambre.

Physical Education—M. le Gorgeu.

Pledged to continue a policy of financial restoration, Premier Sarraut worked ceaselessly since his designation as premier by President Lebrun to form a cabinet replacing that of M. Daladier, which fell Monday.

Lebrun Gets List.

Premier Sarraut presented the ministry to President Lebrun at 2 a. m.

Except for the switch of Daladier and Sarraut in the premiership, the important posts in the cabinet are held by the same men.

The chief variation in character from the old cabinet was an inclination further to the center. Outstanding in the new government is Premier Sarraut's determination to tackle the financial restoration of France and defend the gold franc.

Shortly after deciding to try formation of a ministry, he obtained enthusiastic indorsement of his program to balance the budget at a conference with radical Socialist colleagues. He announced a firm stand for gold against inflation and devalorization, as well as reduc-

Paris Visited By Lindberghs

Flier and Wife Return Secretly to Scene of Triumphs.

Paris (Friday), Oct. 27 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh returned secretly to Paris last night with his wife to visit quietly the scene of his world triumph. Air Minister Pierre Cot was said to be his host.

In their own plane, the Lindberghs left Inverness, Scotland, Thursday noon flying southward, and landed in the River Seine alongside a private airport at Les Mureaux at 5:28 p. m.

They were met there by an air ministry representative and were brought by automobile to Paris, where the Hotel Crillon gave them a suite on the second floor overlooking the Place Concorde.

The Lindberghs went to dinner at a small, well-known restaurant. M. Cot and the aviator, Dieudonne Coste, were believed to have accompanied them.

Les Mureaux, where the Lindberghs were reported to have alighted on the river, is near Meulan, 25 miles west of Paris.

50 Millions In Notes to Bolster Gold

Boost in Price Legal, Cummings Assures Roosevelt.

Drop in Stocks Fails to Alarm Advisers of President.

By Elliott Thurston.

Fortified by a written legal opinion produced yesterday by his Attorney General but not made public, President Roosevelt paved the way for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to exchange $50,000,000 of its notes for newly mined gold on which the price was boosted to $31.54 at the Treasury, 18 cents above the initial fixed price of the day before and 48 to 57 cents above world prices.

George F. Warren, professor of farm management at Cornell; William I. Myers, professor of farm finance, also at Cornell, now deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration, and other proponents of the administration's new venture in managing currency and commodity price levels by varying the gold value of the dollar, were undisturbed by the recession in wheat, cotton and stock market prices which greeted the second day of the new monetary policy designed to lift prices.

Wheat and Cotton.

Wheat fell 2 or 3 cents a bushel, cotton was off 50 to 65 cents a bale and leading stocks tumbled $1 to $3 a share in what to the commodity dollar advocates was a technical reaction rather than a disproof of their theory that gold prices can be manipulated to produce a rise in commodity levels.

Besides the second boost given the artificial R. F. C. price fixed for newly mined gold, and the undivulged opinion from Attorney General Cummings, the day brought forth a new White House executive order empowering the R. F. C. to "hold, earmark for foreign account, export or otherwise dispose of such gold," new Treasury regulations instructing mints and assay officers as to how the gold is to be handled on consignment, and an R. F. C. telegram to Reserve banks requesting them to act as fiscal agents in distribution of the $50,000,000 issue of R. F. C. notes.

Backed by Cummings.

While markets were reacting contrary to the gold-price theory, the President called for and Attorney General Cummings produced an 11-page legal opinion, which neither the White House nor the Department of Justice would reveal.

It was described in a Department of Justice announcement as "fully supporting the position taken by the President and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in connection with the sale of debentures for gold."

Nor could it be learned officially on what basis the Attorney General thus resolved the doubts which had been raised among members of his staff and among other lawyers as to the legality of the process whereby the R. F. C. offers to take for its notes newly mined gold at a price fixed yesterday at $31.54 an ounce, whereas the statutory price remains $20.67 an ounce and the world price about $31.09.

R. F. C. Stands to Lose.

Hence if the R. F. C. were to convert its gold into cash at reserve banks it would stand to lose money at the rate of $10.87 for each ounce of the newly mined metal it obtains. However, not an ounce of gold had been acquired up to the end of the second day.

The White House executive order, issued under the President's emergency powers, revoked the previous procedure under which newly mined gold could be exported, authorized mints and assay offices to receive on consignment newly mined gold and empowered the R. F. C. to "acquire" this gold and "to hold, earmark for foreign

Zeppelin Lands 23 Voyagers in Akron

Will Stay 48 Hours Before Flight to Germany.

Akron, Oct. 26 (AP).—Returning from a visit to th Chicago Fair, the world-traveled Graf Zeppelin dropped gently to earth here late today for a 48-hour stay before starting a long voyage home to Friedrichshafen, Germany.

With Capt. Lehmann, second officer, in command, the Graf appeared over the airport about 3 p. m., and because of a misunderstanding over landing orders cruised about for an hour.

A comparatively small crowd watched the 23 passengers disembark in the center of the field before the huge dirigible was "walked" into the hangar.

Strike Halts Building Activities in Madrid

Madrid, Oct. 26 (AP).—An unexpected decision of the General Socialist Union to join Syndicalists in a construction strike today paralyzed building activities in Madrid, but averted anticipated disorders.

With heavy reinforcements of guards in an attempt to end strike disorders, in which 3 have been killed and 15 badly injured, today passed without disorders.

November 1 Deadline Set For Ford on U.S. Bidding; Mine Heads Face Crisis

President Takes Action to Compel End of Coal Strike.

Summons Steel Chiefs to Conference Here Next Monday.

President Roosevelt acted yesterday to force a test which will determine the effectiveness of the administration's power to end labor strife which is retarding the recovery program. In his move is the possibility of a Constitutional showdown in the courts.

Acting on his own initiative, he ordered the barons of the United States Steel Corporation to appear before him Monday and explain why they have been unable to arbitrate with miners of their "captive" coal mines and end Pennsylvania bituminous strikes affecting 30,000 miners.

If they can not give him assurance that such an agreement will be forthcoming immediately, he is expected to lay down terms for working conditions in the mines and in effect say: "Take it or else."

In so doing he will be carrying out his promise to bring peace to the disordered mine area if arbitration efforts failed.

Taylor Sees Progress.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, telephoned the President Wednesday that arbitration negotiations had not been fruitless and said there was "progress." John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, reported to the Chief Executive that the only solution was for the White House to lay down the law.

Such overtures from Taylor, it was pointed out, might mean that the Steel Corporation is making ready for a retreat which will produce an agreement. However, if it does not retreat and the steel men refuse to abide by the President's decision, the only alternative, it is expected, will be a court test of the Administration's power.

One reason for the President's determination to end the strikes is that he wants labor difficulties throughout the country settled at once so that the codes, which were drawn for a gigantic campaign to stabilize the economic life of the Nation, will have an opportunity to prove their feasibility.

NRA Reorganized.

The NRA has been reorganized for the prosperity campaign; enforcement machinery has been provided and machinery to protect manufacturers from injurious foreign "dumping" has been established. Hugh S. Johnson has passed down word to his entire staff to speed up and get the collection of from 600 to 700 proposed industrial codes through the mill before the voluntary Blue Eague compacts expire December 31.

With everything else running smoothly, it was pointed out, if the administration does not end the strikes it would only be inviting

German Leader In N. Y. Missing

Heinz Spanknoebel May Be En Route to Reich.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Heinz Spanknoebel, a leader of the proposed German Day celebration which was barred by Mayor John P. O'Brien, was missing tonight and there were rumors that he had sailed for Germany.

German-American quarters scoffed at reports that Spanknoebel had left for Berlin. Published reports of his "disappearance" brought only puzzled head-shakes among his acquaintances. Meanwhile, in Berlin, the Nazi Steel Helmet headquarters denied that Spanknoebel was connected with the organization.

18,000 Commercial National Depositors Get 30 Pct. More

Depositors of the Commercial National Bank shortly will be paid a second dividend of 30 per cent of their deposits, amounting to $1,850,000, as the result of a loan by the Federal Deposit Liquidation Board, Comptroller of Currency O'Connor announced yesterday.

This loan was the first approved by the board under President Roosevelt's program for quick release of approximately $1,000,000,000 in closed banks. It will make a total of $2,880,601.70 released to depositors since the bank closed February 28. It paid a first dividend of 20 per cent, or $1,030,601.70, September 27.

Yesterday's action by the liquidation board was remarkable for its swiftness. On Saturday it was indicated Commercial National Bank and possibly Park Savings Bank would be the first two closed institutions of the city to come within the scope of the board's aid.

The new body is limited at present to releasing assets of banks which have been in receivership since January 1, 1933.

It is believed the board's powers will be broadened later to care for banks under conservators and those in receivership prior to January 1, 1933. Although Park Savings Bank was closed following the national bank holiday in March, its placement in a Treasury Receivership in July brings it in the classification to receive first assistance. Its involved affairs, however, may delay this aid.

On Tuesday it was announced that an examination of Commercial National Bank had been begun by the District of Columbia subcommittee of the Fifth Federal Reserve District deposit liquidation committee. This group began an appraisal of the bank's assets.

Commercial National Bank has approximately 18,000 depositors. Approximately 3,000 of these have small inactive accounts, many of them abandoned for years.

Smith Neutral In New York Mayor's Race

Attitude of Aloofness Will Be Continued, Friends Assert.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The New York Times says it was "declared definitely" today that "Al Smith is out of the campaign" for the New York mayoralty.

It adds that the information that the former governor and Presidential candidate will "continue his attitude of aloofness came from close friends" following Smith's return to the city today.

Previously, John H. McCooey, Brooklyn Democratic leader, had announced he had an appointment with Mr. Smith tomorrow and would invite him to speak at a rally for Mayor John P. O'Brien, who seeks reelection as the regular Democratic nominee.

Mr. Smith has avoided taking any part in the campaign and remained away from Tammany's notification ceremonies last week for the first time in years.

Suicide Is Issue.

With major issues brushed aside, New York's heated mayoralty campaign swirled around charges involving the suicide last April of Louis H. Willard, a witness before the Hofstadter investigating committee.

Joseph V. McKee, independent, demanded that Fiorello H. La Guardia, fusion nominee, retract his charges that McKee and Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn, of the Bronx, had "hounded" Willard to death—charges that Seabury, counsel to the committee and fusion strategist, said were not true.

Seabury, who brought out Willard's charges that William J. Flynn, Bronx commissioner of public works, had persecuted him, at-

Gun's Recoil System Kills Navy Lieutenant

Lieut. Fremont Bruce Wright was injured fatally yesterday on board the U. S. S. Mississippi off Rockland, Me., according to the Associated Press.

The Navy Department said he was attempting to remove the recoil system of a 5-inch antiaircraft gun for inspection when it struck him in the head. Lieut. Wright's home was in San Francisco.

Losse of Millions in U. S. Contracts Faced by Auto Maker.

Must Present Figures on His Plants Demanded By N. A. C. C.

Henry Ford is to be given until November 1 to furnish figures regarding his factories demanded by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce under the automobile code, or lose extensive Government contracts running into many millions of dollars on which he might submit low bids.

This was the status last night of the Detroit manufacturer's resistance to NRA and possible reprisals by Government purchasing agents under the President's executive order of August 10.

Legal advisers to NRA decided yesterday this executive order will supersede any Constitutional guarantees of the rights of low bidders in determining the Recovery Administration's attitude in the Ford matter.

Loophole Foreseen.

A loophole whereby the manufacturer might fill some Government orders, even if he remains unresponsive to NRA, was foreseen yesterday in the statement by the forestry division of the Department of Agriculture that Ford trucks might be bought for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The Ford figures in the bids on a contract for some 1,500 light trucks for the C. C. C. was low. It was submitted by a Ford dealer here, who has signed the automobile retail code. There is a disposition to regard this contract as a matter between the Government and the individual dealer, in which case the question of the Detroit manufacturer's compliance could be neatly side stepped.

Although admitting the local dealer angle enters the C. C. C. order for trucks, NRA officials said last night they did not believe bids on Army material, motorized equipment or airplanes could be submitted by any one but Ford himself. The size of the contracts may make them beyond the financial responsibility of dealers, and the Army customarily sets up specifications of its own instead of taking standard products.

Keeps Division Here.

The Ford Co. maintains in Washington a division for Government sales exclusively, having in the past supplied the United States with enormous numbers of automobiles and trucks.

At the War Department, where contracts for a $10,000,000 motorization program and millions of dollars worth of airplanes soon will be placed, it was said the NRA would be asked to pass upon the availability of each low bidder, and only

Euel Lee Dies For Murder

Pays Penalty on Gallows in Baltimore for Death of Employer.

Baltimore, Oct. 27 (Friday), (AP). Euel Lee, 60-year-old Eastern Shore colored man, was hanged at the Maryland Penitentiary shortly after midnight for the murder of his former employer, Green K. Davis, more than two years ago.

Lee walked to the scaffold at 12:05 a. m. and the trap was sprung in half a minute. His body was lowered 4½ minutes later and Lee was pronounced dead at 12:13 a. m.

Within the last two days his attorneys lost four attempts to stay Lee's execution. Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Judges John J. Parker and Morris Soper, of the United States Circuit Court at Richmond, President Roosevelt, and Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes, of the United States Supreme Court, refused last minute appeals.

State Troops Used in Iowa Farm Strike

Adjutant Asserts That They Have no Right to Wear Uniforms.

Des Moines, Oct. 26 (AP).—Thirty National Guardsmen were utilized as debuty sheriffs tonight as growing opposition to the farm strike developed in westerp Iowa.

In uniform and fully armed, the guardsmen with four officers left Glenwood shortly before 3 p. m. to establish headquarters at the Iowa end of a bridge across the Missouri River into Plattsmouth, Nebr.

Adjt. Gen. Charles F. Grahl at Des Moines asserted the men had no authority to don their uniforms.

Sheriff William De Moss, of Glenwood, who deputized the guardsmen, said they would clear highways of pickets and escort trucks to Omaha markets.

Wisconsin Creameries Close.

Meanwhile, leaders of farmers in that area who last night convoyed 40 live-stock trucks through the picket lines, planned to meet Saturday to formulate an antistrike movement.

Proffering their support of a conference of Midwestern governors to discuss agricultural problems at Des Moines Monday, holiday leaders urged the western Iowa pickets to withdraw.

In Wisconsin, only other State where the strike has received marked support, creameries and cheese factories closed in large numbers. Two instances of milk being dumped were reported near Madison.

Sheriff Joseph Shinners, of Milwaukee, said he would have 75 deputies to keep roads open and that more will be available if needed.

Milk Men Ask Embargo.

Milwaukee milk producers voted opposition to the strike today.

Wisconsin's aggressive cooperative milk pool, which will join the holiday Tuesday, demanded in a telegram to Gov. A. G. Schmedeman that he declare an embargo on all farm shipments.

Gov. Herring of Iowa said he had no intention of calling out guardsmen unless the situation should take an unexpected turn toward violence.

Reno Broadcasts Appeal.

Milo Reno, national leader of the strike, broadcast an appeal to other States from Chicago today.

"The plan of the Commodity Credit Corporation to lend farmers 50 cents a bushel on warehoused corn doesn't affect the farmers' demand for cost of production," he said.

"If all farmers would sign up," Reno added, "it would put price fixing in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture. The farmers will not accept half-way measures. They want the cost of production."

county jail, told the jailer he had married again. He was divorced from his second wife, Helene Maria Haskin, who formerly served as one of his models, last July, and there had been no public intimation of a remarriage.

A telephone call to the Barclay home at Westport was answered by a woman, who denied the artist had been married again. She identified herself as "Miss Minardi," said she was a writer who lives on Riverside Drive in New York, and explained that she was "simply here to answer the telephone for Barclay."

The artist already was out on a $7,500 bond, posted in New York City Monday after he had been arrested. He is scheduled to appear in a New York court tomorrow.

Mrs. Barclay declared a passport already has been issued to the artist.

Mrs. Barclay, who married the artist in 1916, claimed that when they were divorced in Chicago, in 1930, Barclay agreed to give her $1,000 a month, establish a $50,000 trust fund which was to go to her in the event of his death, and take out a life insurance polcy in her favor. He has failed to live up to this agreement, she declares.

Roosevelt Orders Mine Strike Probe

lesser industries than steel and lesser unions than the United Mine Workers to quarrel over labor conditions and jam the recovery engines.

Through the difficulties, the United Mine Workers demanded that the steel men recognize unions and in company owned mines grant the same working conditions which prevail in commercial mines of the Pennsylvania bituminous area. Arbitration between Philip Murray, representing the miners' union, and Thomas Moses, president of the H. C. Frick Coke & Coal Co., representing the steel interests, was so unsuccessful that the miners a week or more ago said the President would have to live up to his promises.

Following up, they petitioned both Gen. Johnson and the President yesterday to end the strike and bring about union recognition.

"These captive coal-producing companies have refused to recognize the United Mine Workers of America and to bargain collectively with the chosen representatives of their employes," the petition read. "We are demanding recognition of our union and the same contract and conditions as prevail in the commercial mines of this territory."

The paper was presented by a group headed by William Hynes, president of District 4, of the union. Lewis, the national union president, accompanied the delegation.

Except for the "recognition of our union," the demands of the miners are those which the President has asked of the steel industry. The coal code guarantees the right of employes to collective bargaining.

Public Works Funds to Help Erase Slums in Capital City

New Structures Here Will Be Built as Models for Nation.

This is the ninth of a series on revival of home construction, with particular reference to Washington.

By Robert D. Kohn,
American Architect and Director, Housing Division, Public Works Administration.

The Public Works Administration is assisting the revival of the Nation's home-building industry by allotting funds for the clearance of slums or blighted areas and for low-cost housing in American cities. It is initiating a massed attack on one of the most crucial points in the whole recovery program—the necessity of stimulating the industries dependent on the production of capital goods.

In this attack, it is necessary to reverse the procedure which is usual in a revival of home construction during normal times. In the upward course of a normal building cycle, a demand for improved housing appears among people in improved or improving circumstances. Based on this demand and on the credit made available by returning confidence, a wave of building is started. As speculative private capital naturally seeks investments promising the largest possible return, such building activities are naturally addressed to the desires and needs of those in the higher income brackets.

An income rise with the return of prosperity, people move in increasing numbers to the new residential facilities prepared by the foresight of the builder, deserting their former abodes and leaving behind these blighted areas which we call slums.

In the slums there is little room for individual building initiative, since the ownership of land is so divided, while the problems of the area rest on the buildings in common. Here, then, is a field in which only action in common can function, and the experience of years, both in the United States and abroad, shows that this common action will not develop or function except under the supervision or with the assistance of some Government agency.

By reversing the usual procedure and attacking first the problem of improving housing for people in the lower income brackets, through the remodelling or reconstruction of slum areas, the Public Works Administration will be giving a much-needed stimulant to the industries producing goods for home construction without competing with the normal activities of private speculative building in its provision of homes for people in the higher income brackets.

Many Loans Already.

Up to date, the Public Works Administration has approved loans aggregating $38,000,000 for slum clearance, and further loans are in prospect. The expenditures of the funds thus granted is expected to produce demonstration units which will pave the way for much larger expenditures by public, semipublic, or combination of public and private enterprise, at a later date. It is hoped that these pioneer projects, made possible only by Federal aid, will lead to a broad program of reconstruction of blighted areas in our larger cities, by private capital under the supervision and perhaps with the aid of States and municipalities.

In Washington several million dollars will eventually be authorized for slum clearance. Two demonstration units will be constructed. The first will cover about five square blocks and the houses of this will be renovized and modernized and only in part rebuilt. The second will include perhaps ten square blocks and will be located in a colored residential section of the city. Here the existing houses will be demolished and new ones constructed. While the architecture of the new houses is as yet undetermined, the layout will probably be a combination of two-family dwellings and three-story apartments. The new housing will cover approximately only 40 per cent of the ground, leaving room for courts, playgrounds and many other community facilities.

Will Serve as Models

The demonstration units in the District of Columbia are of particular importance because they will be under the eyes of so many legislative and administrative representatives and officials coming from all over the Union. As laboratory specimens they will be exceptionally fine in design and structure.

There are indications that Washington may be one of the first cities to deal effectively with its slums and blighted areas. The fact that Washington is striving for the distinction of being the most beautiful city in the world, with the Federal Government as the chief financial supporter of the large building program now actively under way, throws slum clearance into particularly high relief in the District. It is probable that municipal and private enterprise will receive a full measure of support from the Federal Government. That this possibility is not mere speculation is shown by the fact that a bill already has passed the Senate approving grants to District housing corporations for this specific purpose.

Slum clearance has many aspects beyond the immediate ones which look to assisting the revival of the capital goods industries. By pulling down the old rookeries and letting the light into a new group of decently spaced and properly planned blocks of residences, most of the fire-risk, health-risk and crime-propagation of these blighted areas will disappear. There will be immediate, tangible dividends in decreased costs of combating fire, disease and crime. And there will be even greater intangible dividends of a spiritual nature. We who are engaged in this part of the Public Works program feel that it perhaps embraces more aspects of social and economic benefit than any other one branch of constructive activity.

Senators Find $53,000 Missed In Tax Return

Ship Inquiry Witness Says Fees Given Officials Were "Overlooked."

Senate investigation of mail contracts became involved yesterday with income tax returns. An attorney representing James B. Reynolds, former official of the Republican National Committee, told the committee that his client had recently written the Bureau of Internal Revenue pointing out the taxability of $53,000 fees from a steamship company which had been "overlooked" in his original return.

The letter was not introduced into the record. Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman, said the committee would go into executive session to determine whether the letter was privileged matter as between a lawyer and his client.

Paul E. Shorb, the attorney, told the committee Reynolds was on a Mediterranean cruise and was expected to return about December 1. Black later stated Reynolds would be called before the committee.

The fees in question were paid by J. E. Dockendorff, president of the Black Diamond Steamship Line, in monthly sums of $500. Dockendorff had previously testified that the money was for advice.

Senator White (R., Maine), who is coauthor of the Jones-White bill which grants shipping subsidies in the form of mail contracts, questioned the propriety of introducing the letter in the record. Black replied that he felt it was pertinent to the query to determine where the funds went, whether they went to Reynolds personally or to support the Republicans.

The committee then returned to its interrogation of C. H. C. Pearsall, vice president and general manager of the Colombian Steamship Lines.

It was brought out that the president of the line, H. H. Raymond, had received a total of $2,929,299 in salary, cash dividends, profits and stock dividends from six steamship lines which either had mail contracts with the Government, operated ships for the Government, or purchased vessels from the Government. This income covered the period from 1920 to 1932.

It was added that these figures included stock dividends calculated at the book value of the stocks. Pearsall testified that in one instance the stock in question, which had a book value of $23, had been sold by Raymond at $125. This increase, amounting to $585,173, brought the total receipts to $3,594,474, he said.

Senator White then elicited from the witness that since the Colombian Steamship Line received its mail contract in 1930, Raymond had received a salary of $17,540 and that the contract called for the Colombian to build two new ships at a cost of $2,400,000 each and the acquisition of a third ship of the same class, although not new.

New Moley-Astor Magazine Scoffs at Fears of Dictator

American "Fiscism" and "Communism" Scored in First Issue.

President Roosevelt "has never confused his identity with the Deity, and such a man can be trusted to keep his sense of proportion," Raymond Moley, former Assistant Secretary of State, says in a signed editorial in the first issue of the new weekly Today. The magazine, published by Vincent Astor and edited by Moley, made its first appearance yesterday.

The editorial, entitled "Wolf, Wolf!" is accompanied by a cartoon in which "Dictatorship" is shown in the person of the "big, bad wolf," threatening a house labeled "Constitution." Under the picture is the question, "Who is afraid?"

Moley comes strongly to the defense of the President and scores two groups, one of which he calls the American Fascism and the other American Communism.

"Congress did not abdicate," Moley says. "It limited the time of the powers it granted; it retains its grip on the purse strings, and it retains full and independent power to restore the status quo ante."

In a signed statement, Astor says "we propose to create a political weekly, national in interest, liberal in outlook, and sincerely independent in thought and action."

The leading article, entitled "Chiselers in Action," is written by William Hard. Other contributors include Edgar Lee Masters, Thomas Beer, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Lincoln Colcord, Arthur Brisbane, Isaac Don Levine and Paul Mallon.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Rhoda Tanner Doubleday, of New York, asserted today it took just four months for the love of Harold F. McCormick to cool.

For his refusal to carry out an alleged promise to wed, the New York divorcee asked $1,500,000 be awarded her from the fortune of the chairman of the International Harvester Co.

The declaration of her damage suit, filed today, claimed breach of a promise.

account, export or otherwise dispose of it."

Under section 2 of the emergency banking act, the President is authorized to "investigate, regulate or prohibit • • • export, hoarding, melting or earmarking of gold. • • •" The White House executive order invoked this section in behalf of the new policy whereby the price of newly mined gold is being marked up and the R. F. C. authorized to acquire it at the marked-up prices.

Notes to Be Issued.

The R. F. C. telegraphed to Federal Reserve banks announcing that it had approved an issue of $50,000,000 in short-term notes, payable February 1, but bearing no interest, these notes, which are "fully and unconditionally guaranteed by the United States," to be exchanged for the newly mined gold. Reserve banks were asked to act as fiscal agents "in carrying out distribution of this issue."

"The notes are to be issued in odd amounts," said the telegrams," so as to equal the fixed value as of the day of the tender of the gold taken in payment with adjustment for discount at ¼ per cent per annum based upon tables to be furnished you in circulars.

"The gold will be accepted in payment at rates of which you will be advised, fixed from time to time by this corporation with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

"Obligations for delivery will be furnished you as promptly as possible. Circulars giving full instructions are now in preparation."

Regulations Issued.

The Treasury Department at the same time issued its regulations, quoting the President's new executive order, for the guidance of mints and assay offices, which were cautioned not to take any gold suspected of emerging from hoarding instead of from the mines. Any person delivering gold to a mint or assay office must execute an affidavit as to the source of the gold.

Thus the stage is set for R. F. C. acquisition of the newly-mined gold, and for the R. F. C. to hold it or dispose of it in world markets. It could not very well be sold to a domestic buyer because he would be exposed to the penalties of the antihoarding orders.

As on the day before, when the first artificial price was set for gold, the Treasury again yesterday morning was the scene of gold-price fixing. Again Undersecretary of the Treasury Dean Acheson, Chairman Jesse Jones of the R. F. C., and Henry Morgenthau, jr., Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, met in Mr. Acheson's office, consulted the London and Paris gold quotations and quickly decided to fix the American price for newly-mined gold at $31.54, 18 cents an ounce above yesterday's fixed price of $31.36 and from 48 to 57 cents above prices on the London market.

Jones Bares Plans.

After filling in the second day's fixed price in spaces left blank in mimeographed announcements, Chairman Jones made them public.

"The Reconstruction Finance Corporation will accept subscription today for its issue of notes maturing February 1, 1934," the announcement said, "payable only in newly mined gold, that is, gold recovered from natural deposits in the United States and any Territory subject to its jurisdiction, at the rate of $31.54 per ounce of fine gold under regulations for consignment, deposit and tender of gold and delivery of obligations established by the Treasury Department and Reconstruction Finance Corporation."

This differed from yesterday's initial announcement in specifying notes instead of debentures.

As for the legalities, it was explained at the White House that the Attorney General had previously given his oral opinion to the President that the R. F. C. gold-buying was lawful though the written opinion was not produced until a late hour yesterday.

Opinion Guarded.

Neither the White House nor Justice Department was willing to submit this written opinion to public scrutiny which it was feared might add to controversy over the legalities.

In announcing that "a formal opinion fully supporting the position taken by the President and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation," had been delivered to the White House, the Attorney General did not state when the opinion was delivered, nor was that fact ascertainable officially.

Counsel for the R. F. C. had rendered a supporting opinion claiming authority under section 9 of the R. F. C. act, and the Attorney General is understood to have held that as this section permits the R. F. C. to "sell on a discount basis short-term obligations payable at maturity without interest," the R. F. C. is free to regard possible or potential losses in its gold transactions, when and if consummated, as a discount.

Amount Undetermined.

What amount of gold might be acquired by the R. F. C. continues to be undetermined, though the $50,000,000 offer of notes for the purpose of buying domestic gold implies a limit. Less than that amount of gold is normally mined annually in this country. At the White House it was emphasized that there would not necessarily be a daily increase in the gold price.

When and if the R. F. C. means to dip into the world market for gold are also unanswered questions at present. The President's executive order yesterday did not embrace such transactions.

U. S. Supports Plans to Help Refugee Jews

Hull Accepts Invitation of League to Join Rescue Work.

Official American cooperation with the League of Nations' efforts to aid refugee German Jews was assured yesterday when Secretary of State Hull made public the text of his note to the league accepting an invitation to name a representative to assist rescue work.

Hull's note was in answer to a communication from the secretary general of the league, dated October 24, outlining a plan to name a high commissioner and a governing body composed of representatives from 15 countries, including the United States.

The Secretary of State informed Geneva that he would be "happy to name, at an early date, a representative to serve on the governing body."

Almost simultaneously the Associated Press reported from Geneva that James G. McDonald, of New York, chairman of the Foreign Policy Association, had been selected high commissioner. Thus, there will be two Americans participating in the relief work.

State Department circles indicated that the American member of the governing body would be a diplomatic representative already in Europe. Hugh Wilson, Minister to Switzerland, was mentioned, though it was pointed out that since the body presumably will meet only once or twice a year, it would be feasible to name a person living in the United States.

Early this month the league assembly voted to create a body to assist exiled Jews and other refugees from Germany. The assembly found that the presence of these political refugees in other countries "constituted an economic, financial and social problem which only can be solved by international collaboration." Funds to carry on this work should be contributed voluntarily from private or other sources, the assembly resolved.

McDonald is expected to open a drive for funds soon.

'Background'

Welles Got it From Chase, but Was "Stand-Offish."

Following is the text of the letter written to Manager T. M. Findlay of the Chase National Bank's Havana branch by Vice President A. K. Geiger on Sumner Welles' appointment as Ambassador to Cuba, read yesterday before the Senate Banking Committee:

"May 3, 1933.

"Dear Findlay:

"As you know, President Roosevelt has appointed Mr. Sumner Welle to be Ambassador to Cuba. Mr. Welles was in the office yesterday and talked with Mr. Aldrich, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Rosenthall and myself. He expects to sail, I think, on Thursday of this week.

Bit of Background.

"Rosenthall gave Mr. Welles quite a bit of background, and, in response to Mr. Welles' questions, outlined as nearly as any one can the present financial position of the government. Mr. Welles did not, however, indicate to us just what is in his mind with respect to Cuba, but in closing the interview we suggested that our Havana office would be very happy to be of any assistance possible to him. He accepted the suggestion and stated that he expected to avail himself of our information and service.

"This note is to tell you of the meeting and to say that you may put yourself on a confidential basis with Mr. Welles. Shortly after his arrival it would be a good idea for you to call at the embassy and meet Mr. Welles and again offer your services.

Record Not Complete.

"We have been unable to find a complete record of Mr. Welles to furnish you. He is a career man and is very highly spoken of as being most capable. For your strictly personal and confidential information, he impresses us as being rather stand-offish in his attitude and not inclined to take any one into his confidence. He may, therefore, be somewhat difficult to get on an entirely satisfactory basis with, but I am quite sure that you will be able to establish friendly relations.

land situation for six weeks, said a cooperative agreement was reached under which the two investigations will not conflict.

Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, criticized the Chase National Bank for failing to insist public works revenues be set aside in a special fund by the Cuban government as a safeguard for bondholders.

Made No Objection.

Decision to send committee investigators into the State Department followed disclosure that no objection was made by the department to any of the $80,000,000 in Chase loans despite failing Cuban revenues.

Recent testimony revealed former Ambassador Crowder in 1926 blocked a $100,000,000 financing proposal by threatening to protest to the State Department. He pointed to the heavy tax burden carried by the Cuban people, and declared the Platt amendment would render the loan illegal.

Disclosure that Ambassador Welles conferred with Chase Bank officials before leaving for Cuba was made in a letter from A. K. Geiger, a Chase vice president, to T. M. Findlay, in charge of the Havana branch of the bank. Findlay said W. W. Aldrich, president of the bank, and Shepard Morgan, a vice president, sat in on the conference.

"For your strictly personal and confidential information," Geiger wrote: "He impresses us as being rather standoffish in his attitude and not inclined to take any one into his confidence.

"He may therefore be somewhat difficult to get on an entirely satisfactory basis with, but I am quite sure that you will be able to establish friendly relations."

Charges Disputed.

The Bruce allegations that "graft" was practiced in the Machado cabinet were disputed by L. S. Rosenthall, another Chase vice president, who took the stand before adjournment.

"I don't think Bruce's letter was based on facts in many instances; it couldn't have been," he said. "It is the kind of letter a person would write after being in Havana only a few days."

The Bruce letter described Machado as the "boss," but declared Cespedes "has ideas of his own, and ideas which are very dangerous for the welfare of the country."

Bruce charged Cespedes "was not content with spending $18,000,000 unnecessarily on the capitol," but wanted to build a large legal center and a city water works costing between $18,000,000 and $40,000,000.

"The various members of the cabinet were very careful not to discuss with me their Havana waterworks proposition because, naturally, they all have a big graft in it, and what they would like to do is to get our money first for building the highway and then it would be easy for them to pay for the other in obligations of various kinds, thereby impairing their own credit, Bruce wrote.

Morgan Tells Profits.

Taking the stand again, Vice President Morgan testified that Chase National Bank and associates realized a combined profit of $3,091,023 on sales of the $80,000,000 in Cuban loan flotations. He told how Chase had advanced the Cuban government $6,500,000 in several installments to meet maturing obligations.

A letter from Findlay to Rosenthal, one paragraph of which was suppressed by the committee "because it might lead to acts of violence in Cuba," said Machado had threatened to default on the Cuban bonds unless $4,000,000 was advanced by the bank.

The letter was dated November 9, 1932. Chase loaned Cuba nearly $3,000,000 the following month to help meet maturing obligations.

Issue of Brewing Stock Suspended

Baltimore Company Must Revise Prospectus.

Registration of a $294,000 stock issue by the Liberty Brewing Co., Baltimore, was suspended by the Federal Trade Commison yesterday on the ground the company "failed to include in its submitted advertising prospectus a number of essential features of the registration statement." Suspension is effective until adjustment is made.

Two other registrations were held up on the same grounds. They were a $75,000 stock issue of the Byron Gold Mining Co., of Omaha, Nebr., and a $237,500 stock issue by the Southwestern Trading Co., of Denver.

Lottery Story Stirs Postoffice Warning

"The department has no discretion to permit circulation of the forbidden material," its statement said.

Heflin Holds Nation Needs Him in House

Former Senator Considers Race Next Year in His Old District.

Former Senator J. Thomas Heflin, who lost his seat in Congress after he bolted the Democratic party in 1928, may make a bid for the House.

He announced here yesterday that he is giving "serious consideration" to making the race next year in the Fifth Alabama district, which first sent him to Washington in 1904. Should he succeed in a campaign against Miles Allgood, incumbent, he would return to his political beginning.

The former senator, who refused to follow the leadership of Al Smith, said:

"I have long been a student of economic questions and I do feel that I could be of service to the President and the country at this particular time in the House."

Heflin advocates aiding the cotton planter by finding some means to raise the price of cotton to 15 cents, trade relations with the Soviet, and also putting more money in circulation.

As for his contemplated race, he declared: "My friends urge that my knowledge of public questions through several years of training and experience in Congress especially fit me for useful service now when there are so many grave and difficult problems confronting the country."

RepresentativeFish Replies to Articles

Denies Leading Police in Baltimore Red Raid.

The following communication has been received by the editor of The Washington Post from Representative Hamilton Fish, jr.:

"Dear sir:

"May I protest the publication in your newspaper of such grossly incorrect and malicious articles as that by William Harlan Hale, on me and the so-called 'Red Menace,' which appeared in your issue of Sunday, October 22, 1933. I would not take the time to reply to it except that it reflects on the members of the House committee to investigate Communist propaganda and activities in the United States, of which I was chairman, and on House report No. 2290, submitted by the committee.

"Representative Edward E. Eslick, Democratic member of the committee from Tennessee, is dead, and I am the only member of the committee left in Congress to answer these scurrilous charges. Our committee at no time considered the question of recognition of Soviet Russia. It is true that I personally oppose recognition, unless adequate guarantees are given by the Soviet government to divorce itself from the revolutionary propaganda of the Communist International at Moscow, which is the same position taken by Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

"Among the many misstatements in Mr. Hale's article was the following, which I quote: 'Literally so, in fact. One of the greatest heroisms of Ham Fish when as head of the Military Affairs Committee of the House, he led the Red-baiting activities of the country, was an expedition of secret police to Baltimore.' The fact is I never served on the Military Affairs Committee of the House, and never led an expedition of secret police to Baltimore.

"Moreover, there is no foundation whatever for the whole Baltimore story, except in the mind of some 'smart-aleck' reporter, as I never participated in either a raid or, as stated in the article 'battering down some warehouse door.'

"The only truth in the story is that I presented a warehouse receipt, given to me by a reputable lawyer in Baltimore, which it was my duty to do, and when informed at the warehouse that it was fraudulent I continued on my trip to New York, not having been in Baltimore for more than one hour.

"I am constrained, out of respect for my colleagues on the committee and a firm conviction that House Report No. 2290 is the most important, comprehensive and useful compilation of exact data on Communist propaganda and activities in the United States, to request equal space in your newspaper as that given to the article, by Mr. Hale.

"I am confident that it is not the policy of your newspaper to be a party to the dissemination of fallacious information to your readers. 'Magna est veritas et praevalebit,' which signifies the truth is mighty and will prevail.

"Sincerely yours,

"HAMILTON FISH, Jr.

Schools Help Pupils Having Defective Eyes

First Sight Conservation Classes Will Open Tuesday.

The first sight conservation classes ever conducted in local public schools will be held Monday at the Henry School, white, at P street between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest, and the Douglass-Simmons School, colored, First and Pierce streets northwest.

Two classes will be opened at the Henry School and one at the Douglass-Simmons. Sixty children with impaired eyesight, selected by the Health Department, will be enrolled, 20 in each class.

They will study with special clear-type books. Walls and furnishings of the classrooms are of a dull finish, designed to eliminate glare. University graduate teachers, trained in sight conservation, will conduct the classes.

Financed by Congress.

Congress appropriated $5,400 for the work.

Mrs. Mildred Hathaway, of the National Society for Prevention of Blindness and a National authority on sight conservaton class instruction, will address elementary school principals at 3:30 today at the Franklin School.

The classes make another link in the plan of school officials ultimately to give special care to all physically handicapped children. Classes are now held for crippled and tubercular children. Children are aided in speech correction. White deaf children are cared for at the Columbia Institution for Deaf and Dumb; colored deaf and blind at Overlea, Md. White blind children are cared for at a separate institution at Overlea.

School officials see a need for special care for children afflicted with heart trouble. They favor a plan, now adopted by Baltimore and a few other cities, under which all physically handicapped children are given care in one center.

Dr. Stokes Shows Films of Africa

Woman Speaks to Juror.

A last-minute sensation was enacted at the trial when a young lady, identified only as an employe of a beauty parlor, approached a juror with a semiaudible comment concerning "prosecution" of the boys. Whether an investigation will be launched to determine if she was attempting to influence the juror will be taken up today.

Justice Gordon gave the case to the jury at 3:20 yesterday afternoon and the members considered the facts nearly five hours before arriving at a verdict. Justice Gordon had gone home and was summoned to accept the verdict. Parlton's father, a Connecticut dentist, was present.

The entire prosecution was based on a chain of circumstantial evidence. The "too perfect" alibi, the finding of the gasoline can, the fact that Smith was short $106 in his accounts at the frat house and the fact that the two were the only ones who regularly lived at the N street place who were away at the time of the fire was considered damaging.

Admitted Shortage.

Smith, taking the stand in his own behalf, admitted a shortage. He claimed it came about through lending money to members of the frat. He said he had settled the shortage with present officers of the group by paying back $75. He claimed also that he inherited most of the shortage when he took over the books of the Sigma Chi.

Parlton, who was identified by Charles Kersey, gasoline station attendant, as being the man who purchased 10 gallons of gasoline and left a $5 deposit on a 10-gallon can, also took the stand. Like Smith, he denied any connection with the fire. He maintained they were many miles away from here when the blaze originated.

They produced half a dozen witnesses to substantiate their alibi. Among these was Miss Helen E. Freid, a student at Goucher College. She testified both boys called on her at her home, New Freedom, Pa., shortly after 7 o'clock the morning of July 9.

The verdict of guilty carries with it a sentence of 1 to 10 years.

At NRA headquarters, it was pointed out Ford is not regarded as a code violator, despite his refusal to sign up or to recognize the administration's authority. Ford's wage and hour provisions are considered in line, and everything now hinges upon whether he turns in the figures on his business which the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce wants by November 1.

Mt. Vernon Employes Forced To Move Homes on Estate

Order Furthers Plan for Restoring Grounds to Former State.

In order to restore more completely the Mount Vernon estate of George Washington, the Mount Vernon Ladies Association has ordered about 15 resident employes to find homes elsewhere.

The employes, many of whom have resided on the estate for 15 or 20 years, live in a group of houses just west of the mansion.

Privilege has been accorded all the employes to move the one and two story houses from the estate to any land nearby they may acquire. Otherwise the structures are to be torn down.

Mansion Superintendent Harrison H. Dodge declined to discuss the order. Several employes were reported to be dismantling their homes.

The families have until May to find homes elsewhere. The employes affected are, for the most part, guards and skilled workmen. Laborers do not live on the estate.

Dodge intimated the plans also are intended to effect economies in operation of the estate.

The Mount Vernon Association is a private organization, which bought the estate and restored it to its former state.

Cold lunches are not so good, especially in bad weather. With winter approaching, the girls employed by the Tennessee Valley Authority at old Tempo F, near the National Museum and far from a cafeteria, realized their luncheon situation was going to be bad. So they pooled their funds and purchased electric equipment necessary for making coffee and warming lunches. Those shown enjoying their first luncheon yesterday in the improvised grill are, left to right, Janet Payne, Helen Greenwald, Virginia Morris, Harriett Reed and Mildred Standiford.

Bar on Liquor Ads Is Raised For Dry States

Attorney General Shifts Burden of Work on Postal Officers.

The jumbled liquor situation was given added complexity yesterday with a ruling by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, which, in effect, held liquor advertisements to be illegal in dry States.

The ruling placed the burden of determining violations of the Reed amendment, which forbids the mailing of matter containing liquor advertisement to dry States, squarely up to the Postoffice Department. It held that repeal of the eighteenth amendment will not affect the Reed amendment.

The opinion was interpreted as meaning that newspapers, magazines and periodicals will not be able to publish liquor ads until Congress acts on the Reed amendment.

Meanwhile, the interdepartment committee studying tax, regulatory and statute features of repeal, prepared to forward its findings to President Roosevelt. The committee, under diction of Acting Secretary of the Treasury Atcheson, will submit a report to give the President a basis for formulating recommendations to Congress.

The opinion at once sent postoffice officials into a huddle to determine their policy. In the absence of Postmaster General Farley, the question was turned over to Joseph C. O'Mahoney, acting Postmaster General, and Horace J. Donnoley, acting department solicitor.

The "teeth" of the Cummings decision were revealed by the statement that "if alleged violations of the Reed amendment are reported to the Department of Justice by the Postmaster General, this department will give appropriate attention to such cases."

Violation of the amendment is punishable by fine up to $1,000 and imprisoament of up to six months. It applies to publishers and dealers who insert advertisements.

The only course for the Postoffice Department, in the light of the opinion, is to enforce the law. The department was not prepared last night to announce what interpretations it would follow.

Liquor advertising in recent weeks brought the subject up for decision.

Among the questions the opinion puts up to the department is that of determining whether an "institutional" type of advertisement on temperance constitutes an advertisement of liquor.

Washington State Gets Second Million

The Public Works Administration yesterday advanced $1,000,000 to the State of Washington for the excavation and disposal of materials overlying the foundations of the Grand Coulee dam project, to be built at a cost of $63,000,000.

The advance supplements a previous allotment of $1,000,000. Officials said the second allotment would speed preliminary work.

5 States Are Allotted $3,805,594 for Relief

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration yesterday alloted $3,805,594 for unemployment relief in five States. The grants were as follows: Connecticut, $702,311; New Jersey, $2,015,110; Alabama, $753,775; Nevada, $34,398; and Nebraska, $300,000.

Bowery Beer

It Was Free, but Board Says Theater Must Pay.

Complaint that the management of the Palace Theater has violated the District beer law will be laid before the District Commissioners today by the beer board.

To give atmosphere to its showing of the motion picture, "The Bowery," a bar was set up on the second floor of the theater and free beer dispensed to patrons. The District attorney ruled as the beer was given away and not advertised as an inducement to draw audiences, the law was not violated.

The beer board contents the law specifically prohibits giving away of beer at any place without a beer license to which admission is charged.

U. S. Employe Job Insurance Bill Is Planned

Federal Bar Association to Back Legislation for System.

Legislation providing unemployment insurance for Government employes and to correct defects in laws relating to Government workers has been ordered drafted by the Federal Bar Association.

The unemployment insurance law would set up a fund to which both the employe and the Government would contribute, similar to the present pension fund. When an employe left the service, he would be paid a lump sum from this fund.

Changes will be sought in the present law forbidding employes from participating in the pension fund if permanent Government service has been interrupted by a temporary Federal job.

The association's executive council also ordered its legislative committee to draw up a law providing for voluntary retirement after 30 years of service.

The association has also voted to give publicity to the plight of employes who draw from the Government their retirement fund after leaving the service. This money is often spent, as a result of economic pressure. Then if the worker is hired again he must return the amount withdrawn before he can again participate in the pension system.

The proposed Copeland-Black old age pension bill for the District has been indorsed by the association, dependent on amendment requiring families to support aged relatives when able to do so.

Driver's Legs Convince Court He Wasn't A.W.O.L. From Cab

Police Judge Dismisses Case on Measurement by Foot Ruler.

Taxi Driver Charles F. Prevost displayed his long legs in Police Court yesterday and was acquitted of being more than five feet from his car while it was parked at a hack stand.

Seated in the front of another cab in back of his own playing cards, Prevost left one leg dangling out the door resting on the lower part of the fender. Policeman H. P. Miller came along and gave him a ticket.

When the policeman had gone, Prevost pulled out a foot ruler and measured the distance from where the tip of his foot had been resting to the rear bumper of his car, parked in front. He found it was four feet and five inches. Then he posted collateral and determined to fight the case in court.

"This case is dismissed," said Judge Gus A. Schuldt, after hearing the evidence and looking at Prevost's long legs. "it looks like a yard stick should be made a part of a policeman's equipment.'

Bank Liability Denied by Two

Defense Witnesses Take Stand in $300,000 Damage Suit.

Two officers of the former Farmers and Mechanics Bank, of Georgetown, yesterday testified as defense witnesses in the trial of a suit in which Mrs. Louise T. Chambers is asking $300,000 damages from Riggs National Bank and seventeen former officers and directors of the former bank.

They were Harold W. Burnside and Harry L. Selby. Both said that the bank took no part in dealings between Harry V. Haynes, former president and Mrs. Chambers. It is Mrs. Chambers contention that the bank was responsible for a loss of $166,000 in stocks and a large amount of cash which she sustained through, she said, stock market manipulations by Haynes.

Riggs is named as a defendant because it took over the Georgetown bank after Haynes' juggling of funds there became known. Haynes served a term in prison for misapplying funds of the bank.

Tobacco Ads' Cost Studied

Figures on Sums Spent Sought by U. S. Farm Administration.

(Associated Press.)

The Farm Administration's tobacco section has asked several large advertising agencies for figures on amounts spent on advertising by tobacco manufacturers.

J. B. Hutson, chief of the division, yesterday said the figures are wanted "for information only."

S. Clay Williams, president of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., said, at a recent hearing on the flue-cured tobacco marketing agreement, that Farm Administration had indicated it considered excessive the amounts tobacco companies spend for advertising.

Corn and Hog Farmers Fear Tax "Backfire"

Packers Reported Ready to Offset Processing by Price Cut.

The administration program for helping corn and hog farmers is in danger of backfiring with losses to the farmers, Secretary Wallace said yesterday.

He said word had come to him from the corn belt "that the impression is being spread abroad that the packers are going to drop the prices of hogs 50 cents per hundredweight on November 5 at the time the processing tax is put on."

"We hope it may not be necessary for us to have something of a showdown with the packers during the month of November," he added. "I am hoping the outcome will be that within a short time all of us—packers and farmers alike—will be pulling together to get the most money possible, with justice to the laboring man, into the hands of the people of the hog and corn country."

Would Raise $350,000,000.

The processing tax, starting at 50 cents a hundredweight and gradually increased to $2, is expected to raise, during a two-year period, about $350,000,000 to reimburse hog and wheat farmers for reducing their production.

Interest rate to corn farmers will be 4 per cent, the same rate as that which will govern loans, George N. Peek, farm administrator, announced.

Loans will be made on the basis of 50 cents a bushel for No. 2 December corn at Chicago, in States with warehouse laws—Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, South Dakota and Kansas. No announcement of loans to farmers in other corn-producing States has been made.

Loans, Peek said, are aimed to "provide farmers with working funds in advance of the time when benefit payments can be made."

Wallace announced that wheat farmers have signed up the equivalent of about 80 per cent of the average national seeded acreage in the Farm Adjustment Administration's acreage reduction campaign. He estimated that cash benefits to farmers for agreements to restrict plantings next year 15 per cent will exceed $102,000,000.

Checks Next Week.

The first checks will be issued next week and will go to farmers in several Virginia counties. Distribution of checks to the large wheat-growing sections of the West will hit a peak in November, Wallace said.

Prospect for a Federal loan to sugar producers increased with a statement by Oscar Johnston, finance director of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, that President Roosevelt had submitted the product to the Commodity Credit Corporation. He said corporation attorneys had decided it would be legal to make loans. Other commodities submitted by the President are cotton, corn, peanuts, beans and dairy products.

Johnston said options on Government cotton in the South probably would be sent out next week and probably will be released as soon as sent to the holders. Approximately 2,400,000 bales are involved.

Options at 6 Cents.

Growers who participated in the cotton reduction campaign last summer were given options at 6 cents a pound.

As the options are released, the cotton may be sold and the difference between 6 cents and the present market price will be profit to the grower.

Johnston also said that there was a prospect that the Government would lend 10 cents a pound on the option cotton.

Al Smith Neutral In Mayor's Race

tributed LaGuardia's assertions to "fatigue."

LaGuardia Flays "System."

"By disavowing the utterance of his own candidate for mayor, Judge Seabury has established the truth of what I have been saying all along—that LaGuardia is irresponsible and unworthy of trust."

LaGuardia answered:

"Ed Flynn (McKee backer) was the boss of the machine in the Bronx and conditions there could not exist without his knowledge and must have been known to Joseph V. McKee.

"The vicious political system that now exists there was responsible for everything that has happened in the Bronx, including the Willard case. It's the system that made the Willard case possible."

Seabury asserted "the bankruptcy of the McKee campaign" was revealed "by the almost ludicrous efforts to make an issue out of a mere incident of the speaking campaign."

Seabury demanded that McKee answer whether the "real reason" he restored F. T. McEnemy, ah employe in the Aldermanic President's office, 'was that Mr.' McEnemy served upon him an affidavit in which he made serious charges against Mr. McKee.

Untermyer Is Attacked.

Into the campaign came the name of Samuel Untermyer, who was described by George V. McLaughlin, McKee's campaign manager, as "public enemy No. 1."

"If I were to express my own opinion of that adviser to the mayor I'd list him as public enemy No. 1," said McLaughlin. "Every unsound idea that Mayor O'Brien could get—and God knows he has had plenty—he got from Untermyer."

Untermyer replied that "it was astonishing that a lot of foolish things an ordinarily sensible man will say in the heat of a political campaign."

Mayor O'Brien called on his opponents to refrain from attacks on the management of the city's unemployment relief.

Tone-Painting Is Symphony's Concert Theme

Dr. Hans Kindler Directs Constitutional Hall Program.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

With the exception of Chausson's introspective symphony in B flat, the program of last evening's concert by the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall, under the direction of Dr. Hans Kindler, was virtually an exhibition of tone paintings.

The Weber overture to "Euryanthe" is little more than a pictorial synopsis of the opera; Liszt's symphonic poem, "Tasso: Lamento e Trionfo," is a portrait against a period background, and the two "Oriental Impressions" of Henry Eichheim are Whistlerian canvases.

Werber was not in an inspirational vein when he composed "Euryanthe." Melodist that he was, he could not help investing the score with some of the shimmering fabrics of beauty, but his romantic fancy failed him at times before the extravagances of the libretto.

The overture betrays signs of the impatience of an artist hurrying to complete a set task. It is competently built on material from the opera, and it has some passages of enduring charm, but as a whole it lacks conviction.

The Chausson symphony is a work which awakens in one a feeling of regret that the hand that wrote it was stilled before the composer's talent had fully matured. To call it promising is not to belittle it, but to praise it for the sound qualities of its thought and the sincerity of its utterance. The influence upon Chausson of his teacher, Cesar Franck, was more than a superficial thing, noted by us now in harmonic echoes and thematic reflections.

Franck taught him not only how to weave tones, but also how to see with the inward eye the mystic world behind the veil of matter. The technical lessons Chausson did not learn as well as the precepts of spiritual wisdom. In his symphony are weaknesses of structure and flaws in craftsmanship, but the work soars in aspiration and reaches heights of communion. If it contains some of the questionings that wondering mortals address to the universe around them, it also holds answers that spring from faith.

Eichheim's Works Given.

From the seven movements of Henry Eichheim's suite, "Oriental Impressions," Dr. Kindler chose for performance last evening the "Chinese Sketch" and the "Japanese Nocturne." Perhaps he will give the others later. Mr. Eichheim has visited the Orient with ears keen for the musical idiom of an alien race. What he heard in the streets, in theaters and in the temples he set down with the accuracy of a skilled transcriber. But he did more than that. He enlarged those field notes into realistic pictures of native life and tinted them with the instrumental colors of the Occident.

Realistic as these pictures are in their details, they are imbued as well with the flavor of romance. Their realism is the kind that permits the hearer to mix imagination with facts. They were so much to the taste of the audience that when Dr. Kindler asked if a repitition of the "Japanese Nocturne" would be acceptable, there was loud applause of assent.

The "Tasso" of Franz Liszt wears well with the flight of years, as do all the symphonic poems he composed. Their vitality comes from the personality of their maker. He lived intensely, and something of his vigor passed into the music that he wrote with the passion of a poet. The orchestra, too, felt that impulse, and played the work with a degree of rhapsodic abandon.

Driver to Get Hearing In Fatal Crash Case

William R. Nichols, 26, 3126 Sixteenth street northwest, will be given a preliminary hearing November 24 in Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville, on a charge of manslaughter. The charges arose from an accident Wednesday in which a 20-month-old baby was killed.

Nichols was driver of a car in which Mrs. May Etcher Cain, 25, 5303 Fifth street northwest, was injured and her baby, Robert J. Cain, jr., fatally injured when it crashed into a tree on Old Bladensburg road near Four Corners, Md.

Nichols was released on $500 bond.

Havana Fears For American

Sugar Manager Still Held Prisoner as Labor Troubles Flare.

Havana, Oct. 26 (AP).—Fears were expressed for the life of an American manager of a sugar mill in Oriente Province tonight as reports told of widespread labor trouble in many sections of Cuba.

C. M. Hervis, manager of the Alto Cedro sugar mill, near Antilla, was still a prisoner of workers there and reliable reports said the situation was "menacing and disquieting."

While disorders in the capital and the interior increased, the government of President Grau San Martin faced a new labor threat today.

The potent and Communistic National Labor Confederation voted a general strike, but did not decide on either its date or what would be its duration.

Five hundred delegates from many unions affiliated with the confederation assembled secretly to vote the strike.

Today's disorders included the bombing of the home of Carlos Mendieta, veteran Nationalist leader, two small bombs in a street car, an attempt to assassinate Sergio Carbo, one of the backers of President Grau, and a soldier and labor clash at Jaronu, Camaguey Province.

Arkansas Pledges Interest on Bonds

Replies to Pennsylvania Threat of Court Suit.

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 26 (AP).—Formal notice from the State of Pennsylvania that it would seek, through action in the United States Supreme Court, to force Arkansas to meet its highway bond requirements brought an answer today that if a Federal court injunction is dissolved and funds are released, this State will pay the interest on bonds held by other States.

Pennsylvania holds $200,000 of Arkansas highway bonds, which are included in the $146,000,000 of road obligations the 1933 Legislature sought to refund.

It's a Draw

Judge Can't Find Majority When Jury Splits 6-6.

The "Allen charge," a bone of contention between jurists and lawyers ever since it was pronounced in a Massachusetts case years ago, failed to break a deadlocked District Supreme Court jury yesterday.

The charge, in effect, is given a jury apparently unable to agree. Jurors are instructed that the minority should listen to arguments of the majority. Justice Joseph W. Cox admonished the jurors. The foreman reported there was no minority, as the jury stood six to six.

After further deliberation the jury reported it was unable to agree. The case was one in which Richard Adams, colored, was accused of the theft of an automobile. A new trial was ordered.

Spider Bite Sends Woman to Hospital

The bite of a large black spider, similar to a tarantula, sent Mrs. Catherine Cochran, 26, East Riverdale, Md., to Casualty Hospital in a serious condition late yesterday.

As she was preparing a meal at her home, Mrs. Cochran felt a sting in her right arm and saw the large insect scurry from her body to the floor. As pain increased in her arm, she called her cousin, H. D. Fletcher, same address, and he took her to the hospital.

Actor's Yacht Towed to Port

Battered by Storm, Ship Is Saved by Coast Guard Cutter.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—With her deck strewn with torn sails and broken rigging, her engine room and much of her hull three feet under water and her crew bedraggled, the auxiliary schooner yacht Aurora was towed into Hampton Roads this morning by the Coast Guard cutter Mendota.

Malcolm Macgregor, movie actor, and six other men composing the crew, told thrilling stories of the vessel's battle against a northern gale 10 miles south of Currituck, N. C.

T. Simonsen, mate, was washed overboard after the yacht was being towed, but he caught a rope and was hauled aboard.

The vessel left New York last Monday for Los Angeles. Capt. G. Grinstad is the yacht's skipper.

The Aurora was formerly owned by William Thaw, brother of Harry K. Thaw, but was sold to William Nartness and was purchased from him by Mrs. Lewis Stone, wife of the movie actor. Macgregor was sent to New York to superintend the cruise to the West Coast.

Body of Auto-Crash Victim Is Robbed

Widow Reports Love's Pocketbook Stolen.

Police last night sought "the world's meanest thief," the unidentified bystander who stole the pocketbook of James W. Love, Wakefield Dairy driver, as he lay dead following an automobile accident Wednesday at Garfield street and Belview terrace.

The loss was not discovered until Love's effects were returned to the widow yesterday. She told police she did not know how much money was in the pocketbook but that it was important as a keepsake.

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury earlier in the day. Love had collided with a taxicab.

Love, an employe of the Wakefield Dairy, lived at 920 East Capitol street. He was a son of A. Kingsley Love, St. Marys County, Md., attorney. His widow, Lillian, and a 5-year-old son, James, jr., survive him.

tions in taxes and freights to encourage business.

His policy toward the League of Nations and in foreign affairs would be like that of M. Daladier, he said. On war debts his viewpoint was not made known.

As a senator he was not required to vote on the matter, but when the Herriot cabinet fell friends said M. Sarraut would have voted for payment. Since then, however, circumstances have changed, and Parliament has shown no disposition to pay or negotiate until the British have settled.

"It is in order to continue this policy (of financial restoration)," said M. Bonnet, "that I will give M. Sarraut my most devoted cooperation."

M. Bonnet, who fought stubbornly for the gold standard and the safety of the franc under Daladier, produced figures of the Bank of France showing the institution had lost gold for seven consecutive weeks, during talks today with the premier-designate.

Bonnet warned the figures showed the necessity for a program of economy, in order to avoid inflation.

The court refused to grant an injunction, asked by national anti-repeal forces led by Dr. William Sheafe Chase, of the International Reform Federation, Washington, D. C.

The drys sought to prevent Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the Commonwealth, from placing on the ballot the names of 15 wet and 15 dry-pledged candidates for delegates to the State repeal ratification convention in Harrisburg December 5.

The Price of a Shirt.

In his address of last Sunday President Roosevelt said that there are big chiselers and also petty chiselers who seek to make an undue profit on the basis of untrue statements. He cited as an illustration the case of a salesman who tried to justify an increase of $1 in the price of a cotton shirt, formerly selling for $1.50, by telling his customer that the advance was due to the processing tax. Actually, there was about one pound of cotton in the shirt and the processing tax amounted to only 4.2 cents.

Official spokesmen for the A. A. A. rely habitually upon computations of this sort to discredit exaggerated statements concerning the price-raising effects of the processing tax. As a result, the public is encouraged to believe that the advance in the price of a cotton shirt containing a pound of cotton should not exceed 4 cents plus.

Obviously, the cotton processing tax alone would not justify an advance of $1 in the price of a shirt which formerly sold for $1.50, and salesmen who try to explain such an increase by making the tax the scapegoat either are grossly ignorant or outrageously mendacious. But extreme overstatements can not be refuted by attempting to minimize the price-raising effects of the cotton processing tax and neglecting to mention other important causes of advances in the prices of cotton goods.

The Government experts might employ their time more profitably in determining the additions to cloth manufacturing costs entailed by acceptance of the cotton code. They should consider also the increased outlays made necessary under the recovery program at each subsequent stage of manufacture and distribution until the finished cotton garment reaches the consumer. Even the processing tax is more important than it appears to be because it is levied on raw cotton, and finished cotton garments have to carry the cost of waste cotton, subject to tax, and of goods wasted in cutting materials used in making these garments.

Clearly, all the factors affecting retail prices of shirts and other garments must be taken into account in order to ascertain whether current increases are or are not warranted. Many retailers who have no desire to profiteer lay themselves open to suspicion of sharp dealings because they do not understand the nature of the price-making process and hence are unable properly to present the facts to their customers. Intelligent and unbiased analysis of all the elements that enter into production and distribution costs is needed, not only to protect the consumer against extortion, but also to safeguard the conscionable merchant against misrepresentation of the facts concerning price increases incident to the recovery program.

Navy Day.

Every year the people of the United States are invited on Navy Day to turn their thoughts to the Navy—what it is and what it means to us.

It happens that Navy Day falls on the anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, that President whose special interest and pride in the Navy were never obscured by other multifarious interests and tasks. His dispatch of the fleet around the world strengthened friendships with many nations, gave valuable instruction to naval officers, and deepened the respect of foreign peoples for the United States and what it represents as a peace force in the world.

The Navy is always on duty, subject to call toward any part of the world. Its officers are in constant training, not only in the technique of naval operations, but in international law and the customs that govern the intercourse of governments. Its men learn much of foreign lands in their cruises and thereby become better Americans.

It is well that the thoughts of all citizens should be turned today to the faithful personnel of the Navy, on duty at home and in far-off places.

An Uprising in the East?

Can it be that the eastern part of the United States is about to engage in a "pork" revolution? Is it true that popular indignation over what is regarded as the maldistribution of "pork" is about to reach the boiling point? The guarded but ominous utterance of J. Hampton Moore, Mayor of Philadelphia, provokes anxiety on this score.

"Representatives from the Middle West and Southwest secure a major share of the pork at Washington," said Mayor Moore recently at a waterway gathering at Baltimore. The mayor is president of the association, head of the Nation's third largest city, a former member of Congress, biographer of "Uncle Joe" Cannon, and expert in the delicate process whereby Federal largess is or should be spread impartially over Uncle Sam's domain.

"We have no fault to find except possibly with our own Representatives in this distribution of pork, if it is pork," added the spokesman of the East. "The story might be different if a greater interest and a greater activity were displayed by Eastern interests in dealing with their Representatives at the National Capital."

Mayor Moore finds no fault with other parts of the country when they collect their share. But he hints that the East must have its share also, even if Eastern "interests" must be stirred to the point of "building a fire" under delinquent Representatives.

Nothing but enforcement of the iron rule of the square deal can insure the safety of the Republic when the distribution of "pork" is involved!

Jobs and Public Works.

Nearly two-thirds of the $3,300,000,000 public works fund has been allocated to specific projects. An announcement early this week indicates that the entire sum will have been allotted by January 1 to Federal, State and municipal agencies and "other public bodies" as prescribed in the public works act. A new record for the allocation of funds for public works doubtless will be established.

There is a wide gap, however, between the amount of money allocated and the amount that is being spent for construction work. The Public Works Administration earmarks a portion of its fund for a specific project as soon as construction of that project with public works money is approved. Details of the arrangement must be worked out later.

Before money can be obtained for a State project, for example, a contract for the purchase of the required amount of that State's bonds by the P.W.A. must be signed. Then bids for the construction work must be checked by P.W.A. engineers for the State in question. Finally, the same engineers must approve the construction contracts before money to start the work can be drawn from the Treasury.

It is a mistake, therefore, to assume that the entire sum allocated to public works projects—approximately $2,050,000,000—is now filtering into the channels of industry and employment. No estimate is available for the total cost of all projects that are actually under way. The P.W.A. is just beginning to assemble data on the initiation of State enterprises.

Under an allotment of about $1,281,000,000 for construction under the auspices of the Federal Government recent estimates show that contracts already awarded call for an expenditure of $275,000,000; contracts being advertised total $175,000,000 more, and work undertaken directly by the departments without the letting of contracts will cost $121,000,000.

In other words, less than half of the money allotted to Federal construction is in the process of being spent, according to the latest estimates, even if projects for which contracts are now being let are included in this group. Much of the preliminary work has been done on other approved projects, however, and a sharp rise in the amount of money actually being spent on public works is expected.

More than 1,000,000 wage and salary earners, according to P.W.A. officials, are being paid "with the public works dollars." These include the staffs of the National Recovery Administration, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the entire personnel of the Civilian Conservation Corps. But only 125,000 men are employed on actual construction work with public works funds. It is estimated that 275,000 men have been given employment indirectly by reason of the increased demand for building materials.

Stay-at-Home Voters.

The figures compiled by Simon Michelet, president of the Get-Out-the-Vote Club, always are of interest as revealing the extent of participation in government by the voters. This year's resume, dealing with the Presidential election of 1932, indicates that registered voters are doing better in going to the polls, but there still is a great discrepancy between the number of potential voters and the number of votes actually cast.

About 66,900,000 natives and naturalized citizens nominally are entitled to vote, but only 47,457,000 were registered in 1932. The votes of about 1,000,000 electors were thrown out for one reason or another. The total vote cast was 39,763,589. The stay-at-homes numbered, therefore, about 6,500,000. Mr. Michelet regards this as a good showing, since 62 per cent of all potential voters went to the polls, or 86.3 per cent of all registered voters. The net gain in the total vote over 1928 was 2,956,806.

The 19,000,000 potential voters not registered were largely prevented from doing so, in Mr. Michelet's opinion, by drastic registration and election laws in many States. It seems doubtful, however, that so many citizens would have been deprived of the suffrage if they really had been anxious to register and vote. Five States—Alabama, Maryland, Mississippi, Pennsylvania and Virginia—failed to increase their popular vote in 1932, although they contained as many voters as ever. The registered voters in Pennsylvania who failed to vote in 1932 numbered 1,053,650, or 25 per cent of the total.

Troubled Siam.

Washington's personal acquaintance with King Pradjadhipok adds to the interest in his fortunes as ruler of Siam. Since his visit to the United States for an eye operation three years ago, the kingdom has experienced a succession of revolutionary movements, with the present uprising apparently threatening the permanence of the throne.

King Pradjadhipok granted broad concessions to the earlier demands for liberalization of the absolute monarchy, but the recent semi-Communistic movement, led by Prince Bovaradej, a member of the royal family and once defense minister, appears to be more serious than the three previous uprisings.

Owing to a strict censorship established at Bangkok, reports regarding the revolt are both meager and conflicting. The latest advice said the King and Queen had fled to Singora, near the Malayan frontier, and that two warships had been dispatched to afford them protection.

Siam has a population of 12,000,000, and its export trade in good times amounted to $100,000,000 a year. There, as in many other countries, economic difficulties have created unrest and offered opportunity for Communistic influence, which is said to be largely responsible for the latest attempt against the rule of King Pradjadhipok.

The Oil Industry's Test.

In his capacity as administrator of the oil industry's code, Secretary Ickes tells producers that production of crude oil must be held down to the figure specified by the Government, failing which he will put into effect the licensing system authorized by the recovery act. He states that some producers are not observing the limitations fixed, but surreptitiously are increasing production. Price-fixing, he observes, can not keep prices where they ought to be if production is not kept within bounds.

The industry as a whole is undergoing a test of cooperation for the sake of all concerned. The Government can not be expected to keep watch over every field and every oil concern. The industry itself can best perform this task of supervision.

Secretary Ickes reminds the oil industry that its product is peculiarly charged with a public interest, as an indispensable element of national defense.

The chairman of the agency set up to govern the application of the code asserts that internal strife is the cause of the industry's troubles. He believes that the code will put an end to sharp practices which, if tolerated, would put an end to the attempt at cooperation. Large and small operators now are under a common rule which all can understand.

The drift toward Government control of the oil industry is not relished by Secretary Ickes, who acknowledges that the oil code is a "take-off on a new economic and political adventure of the first magnitude." The "reckless exploitation and wanton waste" of this natural resource compel, he says, the adoption of a policy that will enforce conservation and proper use of oil.

Apparently the oil industry now is face to face with the question of self-regulation under the code, with the penalty of Government supervision over individual concerns as the consequence of failure to cooperate.

Adventures in Science.

From the Boston Transcript.

If the time should ever come when people resort to the selective expedient of heating themselves instead of heating the house in which they live it would be no surprise to the many scores of spectators who went into "adventures in science" last evening with Oliver Ajer in New Lecture Hall at Harvard University. They saw a demonstration of such a possibility. Mr. Ajer is connected with the research laboratory of an electric company and was giving his audience a demonstration of sound-producing light, volcanic eruptions in a bulb, explosions of atoms, sodium lamp illumination, soundless fans and other mysteries emerging from the laboratory in more or less useful form.

Letting imagination play, it was not difficult to see what another generation may draw from the activities of the research laboratory. Discovering on Saturday evening after the stores are closed that there is no fruit in the house for the Sunday morning breakfast, Mrs. Housekeeper could plant a grapefruit seed before going to bed and the tree would grow up and bear fruit during the night. Mr. Ajer did not promise to grow the tree and bring it into bloom in much less than five weeks, but the laboratory adventure is only in its infancy. Having cut down the time from about five years to five weeks by laboratory experiments it might be only a matter of a little practice to cut the growing season to five hours.

Applying the same principle of radio-stimulated culture to the production of annual crops, such as corn, perhaps such vegetables could be produced especially for each meal. Mr. Ajer ventured no such Utopian promise, but he used popcorn in his demonstration. The corn he placed in a glass, and the glass he placed on top of a bureau. Within an inch or two of it he placed other glasses filled with cold water, and while talking about the radio activity in the air the corn began to pop from heat that selected the glass with the corn and did not touch the glasses that had the water. So it is only a short jump to the conclusion that the day is coming when people may heat themselves without going to the trouble of heating the whole house.

How much cheaper it would be Mr. Ajer did not say. Up to the hour when they knew that the short radio wave could produce heat that way, thus correcting the notion that all it was good for was broadcasting, the scientists had not thought of the possibility of its use in creating sickness for the sake of curing sickness. They found that they could induce a fever with this wave without making the patient feel sick, which suggested the idea that perhaps immunity against fevers could be established.

There seems to be no need of the bright glare that almost blinds the eye. A different type of electric light is possible that has all the illuminating power without any glare. On the platform the light seemed to be very weak, but it lighted up the whole hall sufficiently so that from all parts of the audience came the admission that even the numbers on time tables were plainly visible. Night driving under such street lighting may be done without headlights.

Seeing noiseless sound is no longer very mysterious. The electric eye was made to perform many stunts. In one of the galleries there was a weak neon light, so weak that nobody in the audience had observed it until the speaker called attention to it. That light was reflecting a phonographic record of such soft and mellow tones that they could not be heard, but the beams from it were picked up by the electric eye on the platform and relayed to the loud speaker which almost roared the music.

IMAGINARY INTERVIEWS.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND MICKEY MOUSE.

President—Mickey, you know my views about high salaries in the movies.

Mickey—A mouse must eat, Mr. President.

President—I understand you got from 50 to 100 times the salary of the President of the United States.

Mickey—Can I help it if you don't get better booking?

President (to Gen. Johnson)—General, what do you think of Mickey Mouse?

Gen. Johnson—If the country could get out of a hole and do as well as Mickey, all would be forgiven. What's the recipe, Mickey?

Mickey—I do not cheese to answer.

• • • •

President—Do you realize that with millions of people starving, you are wallowing in wealth and luxury?

Mickey—It's not my fault if the people want to make me king.

President—How did you do it, anyhow?

Mickey—I dunno. I thought I was just another animal act . . . then I looked up and discovered I was the Mirth of a Nation.

• • • •

President—Mickey, we feel that the enormous salaries paid to Hollywood picture stars are offensive to the country at large.

Mickey—Well, cut the Barrymores, the Gables, the Beerys and the others down. Mae West and I are the only ones that are important today, anyhow.

President—Do you consider yourself greater than Barrymore?

Mickey—Since my success in the amusement world the mice have stopped speaking to him.

President—But, getting back to the point, is there any sense in a mouse making more money than the President of the United States?

Mickey—If I were in the business of making sense, I wouldn't be getting $10 a week.

President—Do you realize that you make more in a day than my Cabinet officers and the members of the Supreme Court make in a year?

Mickey—I don't think the film magnates would trade one mouse for the entire court.

President—Are you intimating that you are more important than Justice Hughes?

Mickey—No. All I say is that my audience is bigger.

• • • •

President—Do you refuse, then, to take a cut?

Mickey—Unless it's a cut of Camembert.

President—You realize the country is going through a depression, do you not?

Mickey—I hear it everywhere, but it must be a gag.

President—Well, I am not getting anywhere with you and will adjourn this hearing for a week. I have an appointment with three other great Americans who are grabbing all the money.

Mickey—Who are they?

President—The Three Little Pigs.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Pearl S. Buck.

Not long ago a novel was published which immediately excited universal attention. It was praised by fastidious critics and eagerly devoured by several hundred thousand readers. Its name was "The Good Earth." The scenery was China; the characters were Chinese; but they were 100 per cent human, and the struggle was the age-old struggle between man and the soil. What was most remarkable about the novel, however, was its absolute objectivity. The behavior of the people and the incidents in the story were portrayed without any personal emotion or bias on the part of the author. She had no more prejudices than a camera plate and, apparently, had no object in writing except to narrate what she had seen and heard.

It was impossible to tell, by reading this story, whether the author were a Christian, a Confucian or an atheist; whether her political views were conservative or radical; whether she believed in social conventions or was a rebel. Indeed, if she had not signed her name, no one could have told whether the author were a man or a woman.

I asked her how it was possible for her to write without giving herself away and without the slightest display of conviction or emotion. She said that she had been born in Virginia, was taken to China at the age of a few minutes, more or less; learned Chinese and spoke it before she knew any English; went to a public school in China, where she heard every bad word in the language; saw every kind of low life and received without prejudice into her own mind every kind of thought and expression. She had always wanted to write, but made up her mind that she would never print anything until she had attained full maturity. She thought she ought not to write novels about human life until she really knew something about life from observation and experience.

All Useful Plants Were Weeds Before They Were Cultivated

By Robert Quillen.

The greatest curse of civilization is not liquor or crime, but poverty.

Some days ago an official of a great corporation confessed that men in his employ were paid $8 a week.

Have you ever tried to live on $8 a week? Or $12? I have.

Some 20 years ago I worked in a print shop at $12 a week for three months.

We paid the rent and had enough to eat, but that was all. There was no buying of soda-fountain drinks. There was no riding. We finished the period without debt because we were able to get along without new shoes or clothing or medicine. The need of a doctor would have made us charity patients.

Do you know what a living wage is? It is the wage necessary to keep people alive. And statistics published last year show that the death rate increases when the family income drops below $2,000 a year.

Sufficient bread is not enough to keep people alive. Thousands die every year for want of enough money to buy the right kind of food and clothing or pay for medicine, dental work or treatment by medical specialists. And other thousands die because of the ignorance that poverty fosters.

You can't realize what poverty does to people unless you have shared it.

You think you are honest, but how do you know if you have never been tried? Have you ever been weak with hunger? Have you ever seen your children shivering in ragged clothes, or patched the holes in their shoes with cardboard?

When children of the wretchedly poor gaze in store windows at piles of candy and fruit or observe more fortunate youngsters in fine clothes munching delicacies not meant for the poor, are their hearts free of envy and bitterness

The wonder is not that a few poor wretches steal, but that the millions of poor, surrounded by glittering luxury and abundance wasted for show, still somehow reconcile themselves to want and misery and deny themselves what they can not earn.

Poverty could be abolished if the Nation's industrial leaders would try. There is no longer reason for it except the blind greed of purse-proud men who can not think in terms of the Nation.

Permit the poor to earn abundance and at once you solve the problem of over production, end the burden of charity and find new millions to share and lessen the weight of taxation.

Press Comment

The "Check-Off" Controversy.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The steel companies, persistently nonunion, have opposed unionization of their mines as the preliminary to similar organization of their plants. There is no doubt that in signing the code they relied on the assurance by Mr. Richberg, counsel for the NRA, that they were not acceding to the "check-off" and recognition of an outside union. The "check-off" is not included in the code for the industry, but in the wage contracts subsequently concluded between the commercial operators and the union. Gen. Johnson has since ruled that the "check-off" applies to the captive mines as well.

Probably this crucial point will have to be settled by President Roosevelt. The NRA is now entering upon the most critical stage of the movement, the enforcement of the codes. The original idea was the "self-policing" of industry. But when an industry is torn by strife, the Federal authority must step in.

That authority apparently is now to meet its first decisive test, the outcome of which may have an important bearing on the success of the entire movement for recovery through governmental control of industry.

Signs of NRA Success.

Portland Press Herald.

We now enter a period when this great experiment will be subjected to a real test. Statistics so far obtainable indicate that so far as it has gone the NRA has increased employment to some extent; has likewise been responsible for an appreciable increase in wages affecting thousands of people, and, on the whole, is accomplishing some of the things expected of it. Now if through various ways the people can be provided with money so that they can do their part there is every reason to hope that the NRA will be of material assistance in lifting the Nation out of the slough of depression with which it has been affected.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

BARGERON.

THERE really is no occasion for the apprehension that is running through the ranks of Democratic camp followers over exposures in the Senate committee ship subsidy hearing. Admittedly, it does look as though this field of gravy, so to speak, will be dried up, but there are new fields to be worked.

One, of course, can understand the apprehension. Over the years that the Republicans were in power the ship subsidies gave most lucrative employment to Republican camp followers—and by camp followers I mean those gentlemen who follow each administration and make a most handsome living out of being able to get things done, as the expression goes. There was nothing that more whetted the appetites of the Democratic boys than the ship subsidies. Here was something they were just rearing to get to.

Then to have this trade exposed as they come in with the likelihood it will be destroyed is just an overdose of an unkind fate. What is the use of coming into power if such as this is to be done?

• • • •

BUT there is no need of their becoming crestfallen. All they have got to do is to keep on their toes and not wake up in the mornings with heavy heads. Instead of there being any lessening of opportunity in the camp-follower business under the present regime, its scope is being widened to limitless extent. The very fact the Government has gone so deeply into business makes this true. With the Government's hands reaching out into every endeavor, with the Government having to pass upon how many spindles a textile factory may have—why, the opportunities for bright and clear-headed men who "can get things done around Washington" would seem to be endless!

There is more reason to believe the demand for these gentlemen will exceed the supply than there being any slowing down in the trade. It may be necessary to add a course in the curricula of our colleges to take care of the situation.

• • • •

NOW here is just one thing that comes to mind, which in itself will more than offset the loss of the ship subsidy bonanza: The forthcoming trade with Russia.

I cite it merely as an example of the possibilities and not in itself as an opportunity, because my understanding is that a crowd of "close-to-the-Presidenters" already has formed to handle it.

There are about seven, apparently, who have got in on the ground floor in this. They are the ones who will act as sort of commission merchants between the Soviets and industry in this country, steer purchases of manufactured goods this way and those of something else another way. They are very, very close to the Administration, as those things go.

• • • •

IN view of the set-up it will be interesting to see how Henry Ford will fare. He has been carrying on quite an extensive business with Russia on his own, you know, but the set-up here which is to throw the business this way and that may turn thumbs down on him in view of the administration's hostility toward the gentleman. The business of trade is is very complicated, you know.

However, this is Mr. Ford's worry and not mine. He may just get scrambled in the omelet, which is Gen. Johnson's way of dismissing the boys who get hurt in the new order.

• • • •

MY purpose is simply to give heart to those boys who were on the outside looking in for so long; who sat by in comparative poverty and saw the Republican camp followers wining and dining and running up expense accounts. Unquestionably there will be some readjustments; there won't be the same gravy that the Republican boys enjoyed. But there will be gravy—and plenty of it.

After all, the rival groups should not want to eat out of the same dish.

Recovery.

Out of the ether, out of the gloom,
Out of the sleep of the surgical room,
Out of the anguish and out of the pain,
Back to us all she comes smiling again.

Done is the doubting and ended the dread,
Gone is the fear from her hospital bed.
Now to her cheeks come the roses to bloom
And the sound of sweet laughter is heard in her room.

Here is a joy only those understand
Who have watched in a hall the clock's slow-moving hand,
Impatiently, nervously, waiting to learn
That safely to them would their loved one return.

Joy, sound your cymbal and string up a tune!
Soon she'll be home again! Home again soon!
Out of the anguish and out of the pain,
Back to us all she comes smiling again.

Arms Parley Takes Recess Until Dec. 4

Henderson, Others Insist Work Continue; Hope for Berlin's Return.

Geneva, Oct. 26 (AP).—With expressed determination that the work continue and hope that Germany return to it, the World Disarmament Conference adjourned today to December 4.

"Any failure owing to timidity or a lack of will," said Arthur Henderson, British president of the parley, "would be a confession that the nations represented are not prepared to discharge obligations the conference already has accepted.

"This is a responsibility no government would care to assume before its own people and before the world.

"The moral and political consequences of such a failure would be too grave for the future of the League of Nations and the cause of world peace."

Before a packed hall he expressed the belief that all delegations wished to bring the conference to a successful conclusion and announced that the steering committee yesterday had recommended the recess to permit reconsideration of differences and revision of a British draft convention.

Germany's departure, said Capt. Anthony Eden, British undersecretary for foreign affairs, would cause some dislocation, but "the British government feels this should not be allowed to stop the work of the conference."

Speaking for Spain Salvador Madariaga maintained that Spain is convinced the hope of the world lies with tht League of Nations and expressed the hope Germany would return.

O'Connor Refutes "Politics" Charge

Replies to Accusation in Boston Bank Case.

Boston's political pot bubbled over into the office of the Comptroller of Currency yesterday, with a telegram from Comptroller J. F. T. O'Connor denying charges of political influence in adjusting affairs of the closed Federal National Bank of Boston.

The message was in reply to Joseph F. O'Connell, Boston, candidate for mayor. In a telegram to the comptroller, O'Connell charged that City Treasurer Dolan of Boston had been allowed to compromise his debt to the closed bank through political pressure.

In his reply the comptroller denied political interference in the settlement of the bank's claims.

In addition, the comptroller reminded O'Connell that a note on the bank signed by him for $5,530 was overdue and demands for payment have been ignored. He asked O'Connell's attention in the matter.

Ford Proxies Aid Bank Salvage Plan

Guardian National Payoff Proposed in Detroit.

Detroit, Oct. 26 (AP).—It was disclosed at a meeting of a depositors' committee today that Henry Ford has turned over to the committee written proxies for $23,000,000 on deposit in the closed Guardian National Bank of Detroit, in support of a depositors' plan for obtaining a payoff from the institution.

The committee announced sufficient proxies have been received to present a plan for a payoff to the Federal Government.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 26 (AP).—Clyde M. Gandy, 57, former assistant State attorney general and for more than 20 years a prominent Phoenix lawyer, hanged himself in his home today.

Investigators said he had been despondent over ill health.

Seaboard Railroad Announces Fare Cut

St. Petersburg, Fla., Oct. 26 (AP). Reduced passenger fares, on an experimental basis, were announced by Seaboard Air Line Railway officials today, to become effective about December 1. The experimental period will end May 31, 1934.

A flat 2 cents a mile rate reduction will prevail over the entire Seaboard system, including subsidiary lines.

McAdoo Sees Russian Trade In Recognition

Back From Moscow Trip, Californian Praises Soviet Industry.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Returning today after a trip to Russia, Senator William G. McAdoo described as "very wise, indeed" the action of President Roosevelt in making overtures looking toward recognition of the Soviet Union.

Pointing out recognition does not mean approval of a form of government, the former Secretary of the Treasury said, "there was never reason why recognition should have been withheld."

"It simply means reestablishment of diplomatic relations which are so necessary to carry on trade," he said. "Too, it means the reestablishment of consular offices, which are an essential machinery for international trade."

The California Senator declared the Soviet Union offers a large field for reciprocal trade, and pointed out the interests of Russia and the United States "do not collide anywhere."

He was accompanied by Mrs. McAdoo.

"I wanted to go along with my husband to Moscow," said the daughter of Woodrow Wilson," but our daughter is in school in Paris and I wanted to spend all the time I could with her."

Senator McAdoo said recognition is an executive function and said his Russian visit had no official connection.

"I was only a tourist," he said.

People on the Moscow streets, Senator McAdoo related, were well dressed, seemed to be well fed and happy.

"I was much impressed by the progress and activity I saw. There were no loafers around," the Senator said, "and I was assured that there was no unemployment. Of course, it is true that because the government runs everything, a place to work is found for everybody. And I am informed that if you do not work when the opportunity is presented, you can not get tickets to buy at the government stores."

After a short stay in Washington, the McAdoos will go to California.

Two Waiters Win NRA Judgments

First Court Test Leads to Wage Awards.

Denver, Oct. 26 (AP).—Two waiters won a judgment in district court today in what was believed to be the first court case involving an employer's NRA agreement. The action was based on the agreement signed by Major Avondale, restaurant owner.

"Avondale's contract with the President was made for the benefit of third parties—his employes—and they are entitled to the full benefit under it," Judge Frank McDonough said.

He awarded $107 to be divided between Kenneth Beaton and Warren T. Williams for wages.

Escape Report Denied.

Detroit, Oct. 26 (AP).—A police alarm that three convicts overpowered their guards and escaped here boiled down tonight into the failure of a trusty from Michigan State Prison at Jackson to appear for the return trip to Jackson, after performing with the Jackson American Legion Band.

Mae West Packs 'Em in at Palace Preview of "I'm No Angel"—Halloween Plans

Blonde Menace Duplicates Hit Of First Film

A Full Review of Picture; Another Premiere Soon; Theater Gossip.

"I'M NO ANGEL," Paramount picturization of a story by Mae West, adapted to the screen by Harlan Thompson, starring Miss West, with Cary Grant, Edward Arnold, Ralf Harolde, Russell Hopton, Gregory Ratoff and Dorothy Peterson. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Previewed Tuesday, October 17.

Modifying slightly the utter bravado that characterized her appearance in "She Done Him Wrong," that record-smashing screen rendition of her stage play, "Diamond Lil," which introduced her to the cinema's stellar ranks, Mae West in this, her second vehicle, slightly sentimentalizes herself without any serious sacrifice of the suggestive implications of her every speech, every bodily movement and incessant utilization of the shady device of double entendre.

A packed house reveled in the West indelicasies at the midnight public preview at the Palace last night and by its enthusiastic response to the star's frequent challenges to their sophistication gave every edidence of deeming her the last word in blonde embodiment of the spirit and temper of the day as regards love, sex and the acquirement of riches.

In "I'm No Angel," Mae West assuredly isn't! Encountered first as the featured beauty of a small-time wagon show, we trace her career through one sensational episode after another until she reaches the dizzy height upon which she thrusts her head in a lion's mouth as star feature of New York's greatest circus thrill as a means of crashing penthouse affluence, fascinating scions of distinguished families and otherwise emerging as a metropolitan personality to be reckoned with.

All of this eventually leads to the courtroom, where both Tira's chastity and her motives are brought into serious question. It is here that Miss West in fashioning her drama treated herself a little more kindly than usual. Tira, as the persecuted victim of masculine resentment, finally pleading her own case before a susceptible judge and jury—perhaps slightly in contravention of the best judicial usages—becomes of a sudden, instead of the blatant, self-reliant product of a rough-and-tough environment, a young woman entitled to some measure of sympathy and leniency.

This is completely outside the Mae West tradition. If it is to become habitual, this brassy and impudently unconventional actress is apt to find herself bereft of her major weapon of attack and slowly forced back into the vast army of mediocrity to which at the moment she distinctly does not belong.

Her performance as Tira, of course, is as perfect as might be expected of any star who has tailored her part to her own minute measure. There are many moments when one wishes that she might have been more discreet in the selection of those figures in the play she has seen fit to accept on a social parity—at whatever level that parity may have been found—but in the large view what Miss West has given us here is a gay, glittering, bawdy comedy-melodrama, ingratiating and insolent, that probably will run "She Done Him Wrong" a close second for box-office supremacy.

The supporting cast, as is apt to be true in any picture or play in which the star is so assertive a personality as Mae West, is remembered merely as a vague sort of background for the flashy escapades of a gal who knew her way around.

Most of the best lines in the dialogue the author-star has retained for her own inimitable delivery, which consists in large measure of slithering her words out over clenched teeth through the corner of her mouth—but enough still remain to lend the roles assumed by Cary Grant, Edward Arnold, Ralf Harolde, Kent Taylor, Irving Pichel and the other males of importance in the action some substance, a little sparkle and very definite interest.

Scattered through the movement of the play are a few songs which Miss West sings with the habitual insinuation and innuendo that lend everything she does a more sinister significance than it actually possesses. These, for the most part, are "hot" tunes, which, one is led to believe, were still hotter before their lyrics were subjected to an effectual cooling process by those with the chaste repute of the screen at heart.

It should be said without equivocation that the early circus scenes of "I'm No Angel" are realistic to the last degree, and reflect a complete and compelling familiarity with the practices of the "lots." No less impressive are the later penthouse and courtroom scenes in which an artistic eye of another sort has been exercised to marked advantage.

A new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer miniature revue in natural color, "Rhapsody in Brew;" a travel reel devoted to "Guiana," and the Metrotone News enhance the entertainment value of a bill that needs no reliance beyond its feature.

The only problem that now remains is to try and get in!

While the season of advanced openings, roadshow engagements and midnight previews is at its height, Manager Rodney Collier of the Rialto Theater steps into line with the announcement that on Friday night, November 3, he will present in his Ninth Street Temple of the Muses a gala premiere of what is expected to be one of the most impressive film productions of the year—Universal's widely acclaimed "Only Yesterday," in which Margaret Sullavan and John Boles are the romantic leads. The engagement of "Only Yesterday" will be inaugurated by a single Friday night performance, at which seats will be reserved and the usual gay embellishments of the typical Hollywood "permeer" provided.

"The Goblins'll Get You!"

Elaborate preparations are being made in both the downtown and residential theaters, as well as the hotels and night clubs, for the suitable celebration of Halloween, which is by way of being next Tuesday, but will not be universally observed at that time.

In the Warner Brothers neighborhood houses, for example, the annual children's costume parties will be held tomorrow. All of the usual Halloween trimmings will be in evidence—hoot owls, black cats, grinning jack-o'-lanterns and the like—and plans have been laid for a genuine juvenile funfest.

At the Apollo, York, Colony and Tivoli theaters the parties will get under way at 3:45 p. m. The Avenue Grand will start its celebration at 2:30, while at the Home 4 o'clock will mark the beginning of the festivities. All this Saturday afternoon, mind you, when there is no school to be bothered about.

Cash Prizes.

Cash prizes, by the way, will be awarded the prettiest and the most amusing costumes. These parties have been an annual event in the Warner houses for the past 10 years, the practice having been begun under the Harry M. Crandall management.

At the Club Michel, on Thomas Circle, Walter Von Herbulis is arranging a special floor show and characteristic embellishments to insure an observance in the real spirit of the night.

The Russian Troika, where Sasha Chigrinsky, pianist, is making a deep impression with his Troika Orchestra; Pete Macias' Heigh-Ho Club, the newest and one of the most popular of the Capital's night spots; the Shoreham Terrace and such others of the after-dark rendezvous as engage the attention of Washington's play people, all will be prepared to cater abundantly to the Halloween spirit of carnival that always prevades the city on that eerie feast day.

It is being bruited about in the better-informed circles that no matter how great a hit is scored by "Mary of Scotland" when it reaches Broadway, or how long the play gives promise of running, Helen Hayes is bound by contract to report in Hollywood not later than February 1, to begin the making of a new picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The title of her next for the screen is understood to be "The Wicked Woman." All of which would sound very dour, at the moment, were it not that such things always can be arranged when circumstances warrant.

Dots and Dashes.

Morton Downey, headlining this week's vaudeville bill at the Earle, arrives in town this morning and will be joined here by Mrs. Downey, the former Barbara Bennett, daughter of Richard and sister of Constance and Joan, occurring between the two in the family Bible records . . . Due to the illness of Annie, of the team of Annie, Judy and Zeke, scheduled to open on the bill with Mr. Downey today at the Earle, the team will not be on the current bill . . . Their spot will be occupied, instead, by Mulroy, McNeese and Ridge, a dancing act . . . The Foreign Cinema League announces a German language screen bill for the Masonic Auditorium this Sunday . . . "Liebeskommando" is the title of the major feature and "Melody of the World" of the companion attraction. . . . Last Sabbath's all-French program was eminently successful—so much so, in fact, that the league intends to carry on locally with the importation and exhibition of the best of the motion pictures made abroad . . . Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, one of the most popular orchestras in America, will be heard at the Earle Theater for one week, beginning Friday, November 10 . . . The picture for the same week at the Earle will be "College Coach," featuring Dick Powell and Ann Dvorak . . . This is the first nonmusical film in which Dick Powell will have appeared . . . Last night's midnight preview of Mae West's "I'm No Angel," at the Palace, was practically a sellout . . . At the same hour, "Dinner at Eight," opening Sunday night at the National as a road-show attraction, was being presented at Loew's Fox in compliment to an invited audience of local newspaper people . . . Ted Lewis brings a complete, thickly populated revue to the stage of Loew's Fox today in celebration of his something-or-other anniversary on the stage . . . Not his Golden Jubilee, surely! . . . In the meantime, "The Private Life of Henry VIII" is packing them in at RKO-Keith's, and "The Kennel Murder Case" at the Metropolitan, is surprising them all by justifying its second week by swell business at the turnstile . . . Tomorrow Rodney Collier will get in the running with "Love, Honor and Oh, Baby!" said to be by far the funniest comedy in which Slim Summerville and ZaSu Pitts have jointly appeared . . . That will be pretty funny!

Hoping you are the same . . . . . .

Off the Air and in the Flesh!

The artist sets down an impression of Morton Downey, popular lyric tenor of stage, screen and radio, who returns to the Capital to headline the vaudeville bill beginning today at the Earle Theater. He will render a completely new program of favorite old and new songs and ballads.

Music Lovers Line Up for Opera Seats

More than 1,000 filed through the Stieff Piano Co., 1340 G street northwest, yesterday to buy The Post's half-price grand opera tickets. The sale will continue until a block of 3,000 seats for each of eight operas to be presented by the International Opera Company here the week of November 19 has been sold.

Address Change Deadline Saturday

Automobile License Forms to Be Mailed Monday.

Some 3,000 auto owners in Washington who have not notified the Department of Vehicles and Traffic of new addresses have until noon tomorrow to do so, Traffic Director William A. VanDuzer announced yesterday.

License forms will begin to leave his office Monday morning, the director said, and all applications incorrectly addressed will be returned by postal officials to the Traffic Department. No effort will be made to forward the misdirected blank.

Autoists who fail to receive applications by mail because of incorrect addresses will be obliged to appear at the director's office in person and wait in line for the necessary forms.

Slayer's Final Plea Fails; to Die Today

Last-minute efforts to commute to life imprisonment the death sentence of William Washington, colored, were of no avail last night, and at 10 o'clock this morning Washington and Edward Robinson, also colored, will die in the electric chair for the murder of Mannie Solomon, taxicab driver.

Solomon was killed by the men in a holdup in Southwest Washington on the night of July 28, 1931. A third man sentenced in the case—Leonard Layton—was given life imprisonment when it was proven he was only an accessory. Washington also declared he had no part in the actual killing.

1,000 Obtain Post Half Price Opera Tickets

Early Sell-Out Seen as 2,127 Reservations Are Seized.

An early sell-out of The Washington Post's half-price tickets for a series of world-famous operas, to be staged here by the International Opera Company the week of November 19, was forecast yesterday as more than 1,000 readers jammed the Stieff Piano Co., 1340 G street northwest, for reserved seats.

They came from all sections of the city and nearby Maryland and Virginia, waving copies of The Post, taking advantage of the newspaper's offer to sell readers reserved seats at one-half the opera company's prices by buying tickets in blocks of 10, 20 and 30.

Maurice Frank, manager of the opera company, said last night a hurried check of sales showed 2,127 tickets were bought between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Entire Family to Attend.

A Fredericksburg grandmother bought seats for her entire family for most of the operas—$31 worth. A Catholic University student came to inquire if it would be necessary for him to bring a copy of The Post for every classmate who wanted to see the operas. He was told to send his order by mail.

"For readers of The Post who are unable to make their purchases in person, we are arranging to handle mail orders addressed to the International Opera Co., care of the Stieff Piano Co. or the Washington Auditorium," Frank said. "It will be necessary for them to identify themselves as Post readers by tearing the date line from the front page of their morning paper and mailing it with their order. Checks should be made payable to the International Opera Company.

"I wish to remind The Post readers that seats at half price will be available as long as the block of 3,000 set aside for them for each of the eight operas lasts. One copy of this morning's paper is all that is required to identify them as readers of The Post.

50,000 Will See Operas.

Frank predicted 50,000 persons will see the operas at the Washington Auditorium.

"The Post's half-price offer, coupled to the fact that the opera company is offering its seats at prices for which opera never has been staged in Washington before, will enable many Washingtonians to see grand opera for the first time in their lives," Frank said. "Not a few ticket buyers told me that yesterday.

"Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," the opening night's offering; "Aida," to be performed Tuesday night, November 23; "Traviata," Friday night, and "Faust," the company's closing performance, were favorites with yesterday's buyers.

A special Saturday matinee showing of "Aida" is being arranged for school children and teachers, with seats in the entire house selling at 25 to 40 cents. The Post's half-price offer makes reserved seats for evening operas available at 30, 46 and 55 cents, including tax. International Opera Company prices are 25, 50, 75 and 90 cents, tax to be added.

Paris Routed By Hollywood Dress Designs

Evening Gowns With Splash of Daring Reach Here From Cinema Land.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Who's afraid of that big bad wolf of fashion, Paris? Certainly not Hollywood. The dramatic, exotic styles coming out of the cinema capital fairly take one's breath away. Some of them are too bizarre for off-screen wear. Others have just the right amount of daring.

Two evening gowns that belong in the latter category are in a Washington department store. Tregara, a slinky slik and wool material, makes one that has wicked tango splits in its short-trained skirt. The neck conceals the collar bones in front. The back, cut to the waist, is partially filled in with a panel which is outlined with double ruching. Double ruching also outlines the sides of the bodice. A narrow belt fastens in front with brilliants.

This gown, in black rust, or bronzine, is priced at $19.75. The sizes range from 11 to 17.

Glittering stones are sprinkled all over heavy crepe in another Hollywood creation that sells for the same price. Since these stones are clamped in the material, there is no danger of dropping them over the dance floor. A spilt harness effect gives glimpses of the back and shoulders. The neck is cut to a tiny V in front. Plump velvet bows accent the back decolletage and left shoulder. When the gown is selected in white, the velvet bows are red. Green bows ornament black. The sizes are from 11 to 17.

Youth and vivacity are expressed in every fuzzy bit of angora that makes beret and scarf sets. A dashing one in Dundee green has a triangular scarf which may be worn with the point in front or back. Do try it in front. It gives that soft drapy look to the neckline. Two wee brown spotted quills are stuck amusingly in the crown of the beret.

A narrow visor distinguishes a royal blue beret. The matching scarf is the popular Ascot type.

These attractive sets may be had in red, brown and black, in addition to royal blue and Dundee green. There are several styles besides those described.

Price, $2.95.

The hat that needs a tuck here, a pleat there, or deft touches to brim or crown, will receive expert and kindly attention at a little F street shop.

The woman who requires a large head-size will have no difficulty in choosing a hat that fits comfortably, as this same shop goes in for the generous crown. That doesn't mean that the collegian, with her neat little bob, can't find a beret or toque in the collection. She most certainly can—any number of them. She's likely to lose her heart to something in Bagheera, a new material with deep, velvety pile. It's so pliable that the designers have been able to do all sorts of complicated things with it.

Hats at this shop are priced from $1.45 to $3.50.

The girl of subdeb age may look longingly after big sister for a few moments as she drives off to the football game. But ten minutes later her heartache will be forgotten if she can roller skate in a suedine jacket that is an exact copy of that worn by the adored sister.

Since these jackets may be soap and water, cleaned with they are just the thing for the schoolgirl who is inclined to be a bit rowdy.

Some have belts and patch pockets. Others have adjustable straps at the hips and shiny metal buttons. All have mannish collars.

The sizes are from 7 to 20. In green, brown, tan, wine or blue, the price is $2.95.

Here's something else for the young lady in her early teens: Wool pleated skirts, to be worn with cozy, warm sweaters or smart little blouses. A tile-colored novelty wool, size 14, has a white cotton bodice. A bodice also tops a blue and black wool mixture, size 12.

Others are the plain waistline type. A few have jumper straps. Pockets and buttons give a schoolgirlish touch to almost all. Colors represented are navy blue, red, brown, beige, tile, orange, imperial blue, gray and pastel blue. The sizes, ranging from 7 to 14, are quite broken. That's why the store is selling these skirts for $1.

Something radically different in the overshoe world is a rubber that cleverly simulates an oxford, even to the lacings. The counter is dull and smooth, while the vamp is decorated with lizard markings. It's very distinctive, this rubber Oxford.

It may be purchased in brown or black, with high Cuban or spike heel.

Price, $2.

What's in Fashion?

Pigskin Leads the Pack In Gloves as in Football

Directed by Amos Parrish

Information as to where gloves of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department, The Washington Post, on request.

New York, Oct 27.—For men like Coaches Fritz Crisler, of Princeton; Jock Sutherland, of Pittsburgh; Hunk Anderson, of Notre Dame, or Howard Jones, of Southern California, life is pretty much one pigskin after another. After tossing pigskins all day, these men usually slip their hands into pigskin gloves when practice is over.

Because pigskin—more than any other leather—happens to have more hand and heart appeal to men. And good reason, too. First of all, nature doesn't grow them much tougher than pigskin. That's why gloves—one of whose chief duties is to stand up and take tough wear—are naturally preferred in wear-resisting pigskin.

The pigskins you'll probably wear this fall and winter come from the hides of peccary hogs. Peccaries like to run wild over the country . . . getting their hides well scratched in the process. Examine your pigskins more closely and you'll notice they're spotted with pin-prickslike dots . . . the scars from hair-plucking the hog's back. It's these scratches and dots that ultimately give your gloves their interesting, rough-outdoors look.

Mellow Shade Liked.

With some men, the washability of pigskins is all important since they soil easily. Other men would rather have the mellow-deep shade of long-worn pigskin . . . for much the same reason that they're proud of their darkening meerschaum pipes.

The average man finds that pigskin, with more body than most leathers, adapts itself admirably to his hand.

He knows his hands are well protected. Likes the soft, firm feel of the leather. Likes the elastic, yielding quality of pigskin which makes it so thoroughly wearable.

Almost every man wants his new pigskins in the natural light yellow tan the skins acquire in tanning. Dyed pigskin gloves aren't so popular because pigskin has never taken particularly well to artificial coloring.

Choosing your pigskins (for yourself or for a gift) is no great problem because the gloves divide into just two styles—the clasp (or the button) type . . . far the most popular; and the slip-on gauntlet type . . . better liked this year than for years past. Whether it's a clasp or button is usually a matter of price.

Gauntlets Getting Popular.

But more and more men are liking the advantages of the slip-on. Because it's a thoroughly mannish glove. Because it gives them complete freedom at the wrist. And because it pulls on and off fast—without the bother of buttons or clasps. You'll probably choose your pigskins with extremely simple backs—and avoid ornate designs.

Of course, not every man, by any means, wears pigskins. There are certain occasions, certain men and certain types of outfit that demand gloves of mocha, cape or other leathers and in other styles.

The best way to know which gloves are best for you to wear with what, and when, would be to send for our new leaflet, "Best Gloves for Men to Wear."

Pershing Linotype Traveled Across Sea

In the Government Printing Office is a linotype machine, called the Pershing which traveled all over France in 1917-1918 and still is in daily use.

The Pershing has a flag of its own and a tablet with the following inscription:

"In honor of a linotype that served its country on the battlefields in France. There upon a throbbing motor truck, 'mid shot and shell, this machine typed Gen. Pershing's commands to America's victorious army."

Newest Clip Has Amethyst With Diamonds

Beautiful on Bridge Frocks in Tones of Blue and Violet.

The new jewelry equals in interest the gowns and frocks with which it is to be worn. The old-fashioned amethyst has been given a new lease on life with a polished cabachon cut. It is at its best in a clip with delicate white enamel frame, studded with tiny diamond clusters. This was made to order for the bridge or afternoon frock, especially those in the favored off-blue and violet tones.

Jade is also occupying a prominent place this fall. It combines beautifully with gold and is stunning when worn with sophisticated black.

The loveliness of the topaz is brought out best when it is worn with a contrasting frock. In fact, contrast between jewels and gowns is the latest note and is even more effective than having them match. A happy example is an aquamarine worn with a wine and pink evening gown.

For sports wear, gold and carnelian are used extensively and to great advantage. The gold is worked into modernistic bar arrangements, with a touch of platinum. A wedding ring as well as a flat link bracelet are made in this fashion. Large bloodstone and carnelian rings are excellent for sports.

Yellow diamonds introduce a color note in precious jewelry. These stones are used for a handsome brooch in a horn of plenty design. Fine drops are skillfully combined with baguettes and marquises.

Viscountess Astor Plans Winter Visit to America

Friends in Washington have heard recently that Lady Nancy Astor, or the Viscountess Astor, M. P. to give her correct and full title, plans to come to America after the Christmas holidays for a few weeks.

Lady Astor, who is a hard-working member of Parliament, tries to return to the United States at least every other year in order to keep in touch with her American relatives and friends.

With Lady Astor this time will come her 12-year-old son, John Jacob Astor 4th, known to his chums as "Jakie." Jakie, although a typical English lad of good birth, has a great yen for things American and never tires of hearing tales of his mother's homeland. He is noted in the family for his quick wit and is ready with a retort to any sally.

A devout Christian Scientist, Lady Astor goes every day to a small temple of that faith near the House of Parliament to spend some time in silent prayer. No matter how busy her day or how many her committee meetings, the American-born viscountess never forgets or neglects this religious rite of her daily life.

Cherry Stays, With Silver Border, Once Fashionable

The belles of quaint Annapolis on the Severn, rummaging through the ancient pages of the Maryland Gazette, might be interested in this item which appeared in a certain issue published in 1751 concerning a lady's wardrobe. The latter was said to contain "a black silk petticoat, with a red and white calico border, cherry colored stays, trimmed with blue and silver; a red and dove colored gown, flowers with large trees; a yellow satin apron, elegantly trimmed; a muslin headdress with lace ruffles, and a spotted silk hood."

Alice Longworth's Darts Aimed at Capital Folk

Likens Washington People to Hens With Beaks on Chalkline.

The people of Washington are as hypnotized by precedence as though they were hens with their beaks on the chalk line.

At least, that is how Alice Roosevelt Longworth sizes them up in her new book, "Crowded Hours" (Scribners), just off the press. She takes swift shots at Washington personalities, not excluding her distant cousin, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"The present President has the name of Roosevelt, marked facial resemblance to Wilson and no perceptible aversion, to say the least, to many of the policies of Bryan. The New Deal, which at times seems more like a pack of cards thrown helter skelter and then snatched in a free-for-all by the players, than it does like a regular deal, is going on before our interested, if puzzled, eyes."

Mrs. Longworth indicates that Washington society is not what it used to be. "In recent years," she says, "it has become the habit of hostesses to turn to the press for the guests who will make their parties interesting . . . Now the members of the Brain Trust and other New Dealers are the prizes."

She finds the Capital a beehive of gossip, too, and describes it in these terms: "What so-and-so has said or done, who is slipping, who is really on the inside, is on everyone's lips, until a new rumor or surmise takes its place."

Senators, she finds, are deteriorating.

"So far as the Senate is concerned, I am beginning to agree with those who attribute its deterioration in part to the 'direct election of senators' amendment to the Constitution, possibly more to the direct primaries.

"I do not mean to say that there are not still in the Senate men of both parties who are a credit to the country, but certainly it is true that the direct election opened the gate to men who could never have obtained recognition under the method of selection originally provided in the Constitution."

Woman Rescues Youth From Well

Scales 18-Foot Wall to Save Nephew.

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Scaling an 18-foot wall into a well with 2 feet of water, Mrs. Ethel Ellis, of Leesburg, rescued her nephew, Joseph Thompson, grandson of Sergt. J. W. Thompson.

Joseph, who was visiting his aunt, ran across the well, covered with a loose piece of in. Mrs. Ellis found the water up to the child's chin.

She called for help and a neighbor threw down a rope. The boy was lifted to safety and Mrs. Ellis climbed out.

Face Creams Serve Number Of Purposes

Cleansing, Lubricating, Base and Cold Creams Each Has Distinct Use.

Face creams are divided into four major classes.

There are cleansing creams, lubricating creams, base creams, and "cold" cream.

The first three serve distinct purposes, and the fourth is a combination cleansing and nourishing cream.

Some women refer to every type of cream as "cold cream," which is a mistake, of course. Nor is it enough to specify "face cream," in seeking to supply her skin needs.

The mission of cleansing cream is precisely what its name implies. It is a liquefying type, usually transparent and soft in consistency, has a low melting point and on coming in contact with the skin melts to an oil which seeps into the pores and flushes out dust, grime and make-up.

Lubricating cream is heavier and richer, and contains oils, lanolin, cocoa butter or similar ingredients that counteract the drying effects of exposure, soothes and heals painfully chapped skins, and nourishes the underfed epidermis.

Creams used for powder base are usually light and fluffy. A little goes a long way. It is a mistake to apply a lot of it. Used sparingly and blended quickly, it makes a smooth and flattering base for application of powder.

Cold cream is rather solid looking, nontransparent and white. As a rule cold creams do not melt when applied to the skin, but retain color and consistency.

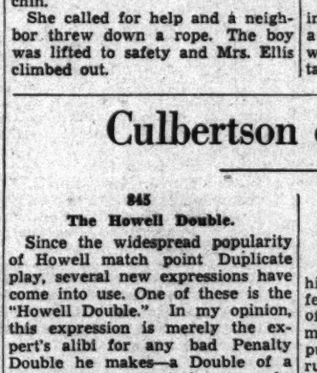
The Howell Double.

Since the widespread popularity of Howell match point Duplicate play, several new expressions have come into use. One of these is the "Howell Double." In my opinion, this expression is merely the expert's alibi for any bad Penalty Double he makes—a Double of a below-game contract, for example, which results in opponents' making game.

However, there is some logic to these light Doubles, which, although they would be horrible in Rubber Bridge, must occasionally be made in match-point play. When you know that you can make a part-score contract, which, with the 50-point bonus, will score for you between 90 and 110 points, and the opponents overcall you, and you think you can defeat their contract, it is very often advisable to double. After all, if you can score 110 points by bidding and making two spades, and instead defeat the opponents two tricks undoubled at three diamonds, you will score only 100 points and receive a very bad score on the board. However, if you double the opponents, even if it seems risky at the time, you can turn this bottom score into a top, and if the opponents fulfill their contract, in which case you almost automatically get a cold bottom, your score will probably not be much worse than if you had let them play the contract undoubled.

The following hand was played in the recent Individual Masters' Tournament:

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	1NT	Pass (1)
2♣	Pass	2♠	3◇
Dbl. (2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—East decides to await developments. If the opponents play the hand at notrump he does not mind defending. If the opponents, however, stop at a low suit contract he will then enter the bidding.

2—"The Howell Double." Bad as the species is, this is one of its poorer examples. With a partner who has shown no indications of strength whatsoever, South is decidedly optimistic in hoping to take five tricks.

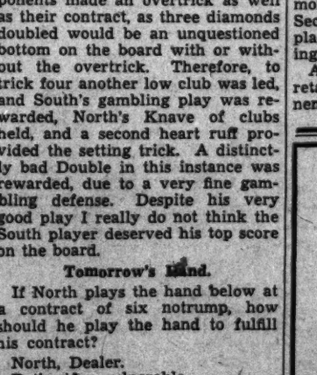
South, however, did actually take his five tricks by an amazing defense. He opened his singleton Ace of hearts, and a look in the Dummy told him that the only hope of putting his partner in twice for ruffs was in the club suit. He knew from the bidding that East almost surely must have six diamonds and four hearts and also one spade, as North with four spades would probably have raised the spade suit immediately rather than bid one no-trump. Therefore, East could have only two clubs, and North must have the remaining four despite his having shown a preference for spades during the bidding. This preference for spades shown by North could be accounted for by the fact that the North player wished to give his partner one slight further chance without showing too much strength.

Accordingly South decided that if two ruffs were to be obtained he must put his partner in with clubs on the first two rounds of that suit. To trick two he led a low club. North winning with the King, and a heart was returned and ruffed by South. South now decided to gamble upon finding the Knave of clubs in his partner's hand, reasoning that he did not care if the opponents made an overtrick as well as their contract, as three diamonds doubled would be an unquestioned bottom on the board with or without the overtrick. Therefore, to trick four another low club was led, and South's gambling play was rewarded, North's Knave of clubs held, and a second heart ruff provided the setting trick. A distinctly bad Double in this instance was rewarded, due to a very fine gambling defense. Despite his very good play I really do not think the South player deserved his top score on the board.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If North plays the hand below at a contract of six notrump, how should he play the hand to fulfill his contract?

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Horse Show And Race Meet Set for Today

Large Number of Entries Insures Big Gathering at Montpelier.

Orange, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Society folk in large numbers from Virginia and other States are expected here tomorrow for the twenty-seventh annual joint horse show and races of the Foxcatcher Hounds Hunt Club and the Montpelier Hunt Club to be held at Montpelier, home of Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville, the former Marion du Pont.

The races, run under the rules of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, are free to the public. The horse show, however, is private and will be held from 9 a. m. to 12 noon. The horse show program includes 13 classes, with ribbons for the winners in 5 classes and trophies and cash prizes in the remaining 8 classes.

Following the show Mr. and Mrs. Somerville will entertain about 150 guests at a luncheon.

Races At 2 O'clock.

The races will begin at 2 p. m. Among new exhibitors will be Richard Mellon, Estabrook Stables, and Victor Germaine. The record number of entries assures one of the largest meets in the State this year. The increase in entries is attributed to raise in the purse from $300 a plate in each race to $500, including plate.

The racing card lists six events. The first, the Orange County Steeplechase, will be run over a 2-mile brush course and is for 3-year-olds and up, carrying from 135 to 156 pounds. Of the $500 purse in each event, $300 including trophy will go to the winner, $125 to the second horse, $50 to the third and $25 to the fourth.

The Virginia, about 1 mile on the flat, for 3-year-olds and up will be the second event. It is one of the most popular races on the card. The third race, the Montpelier Challenge Cup Steeplechase, about three and a fourth miles across country, is the most coveted of all the events. The winner, in addition to first money and plate, gets a leg on the beautiful Challenge plate. The plate has to be won twice by the same exhibitor.

Expect Keen Contest.

The Bellveu, about 1¼ miles on the flat, is the fourth race and is for 3-year-olds and up. The fifth race, the Albemarle, about 2½ miles across country, will bring out keen competition.

The Manton Manor, the sixth and final race, will be run over a 2-mile brush course, and is for maidens and winners of one race.

All entries for the races have been made with the agreement of the nominator that should the acceptances bring a field of starters too numerous for the width of the track at any point the race, with approval of the stewards, will be divided and run in two sections with the added money and subscriptions, if there be any, divided for the placed horses in the two events.

Washington Women in Welfare Work

District Must Give Proper Care to Children, Says Mrs. Himes.

Especially interested in the welfare of children and mothers, Mrs. Joseph H. Himes, out of an unusually busy life, finds time for welfare work of this character. She is a member of the board of trustees of Columbia Hospital, and of the Children's Country Home, the hospital giving especial attention to mothers and children, and the Children's Country Home, which is a refuge for convalescent children who are not quite ill enough to remain at the hospital and still not in condition to go home.

In addition to serving on these boards, Mrs. Himes finds time for work with the Community Chest, being a valued member of the special gifts unit, as well as a trustee. She has been affiliated with the Chest since its inception here in 1928, and has taken part in every campaign since 1929.

"In my opinion," she says, "there is no more important problem facing the commuhity today than its obligation to the young children of the District for whom the various community agencies are privileged to render service in one way or another.

MRS. JOSEPH H. HIMES.

"During the coming winter, we shall need the help and cooperation of everyone in Washington in order that these dependent children may be given the opportnuity, which is their right, to develop clean minds and healthy bodies."

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

If October 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 to 11:15 a. m., from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 5 to 5:25 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 8:20 a. m., from 6 to 6:45 p. m. and from 8 to 9:15 p. m.

For no particular reason at all, you will probably feel inclined to start the day with a song; you will feel carefree, happy and hopeful. In this frame of mind you will tackle problems which seemed to offer no solution the day previous, and you will solve them. Turn down any chance to gamble in business or in any other way, for though you will feel the urge to play long shots, the odds will be against you.

The child born on this October 27 will probably be pretty much of a tease with a mean streak in him that will crop out at times. He will not feel at ease with animals nor they with him; this should and probably will be overcome. He will be inclined to fuss a good deal about his health and will miss few of the usual children's ailments.

If October 27 is the date of your birth, you are more than likely a person whose thoughts rest pretty much on himself. You are inclined to be introspective, though not in a morbid way, and you are certainly self-centered. Your favorite topic of conversation is yourself. Without thinking much about it, you feel that all are interested in what you are doing, thinking and saying. As a matter of fact, you do get around a lot and meet many interesting people, so that your listeners are not unwilling to lend an ear for a time at least. You can be very much of a bore, however. You are perhaps quite striking in appearance, this is true of the women in particular, for coupled with a natural grace and charm they have good taste in clothes and wear them admirably.

Born on October 27, if you can forget yourself long enough to take a sincere and deep interest in some important problem of the day, or phase of business, you will succeed in making quite a name for yourself. You speak well, choose your words carefully and exhibit great tact, especially in trying situations. You put people at their ease, for yours is a friendly nature. All barriers are dropped right at the start. People never forget you. You will need the right mate to help you succeed.

College Girl Prefers Home Under Bridge

But Gives Up Cave-Woman Life When Warned by Officials.

Los Angeles, Oct. 26 (AP).—Gwen Enerson, 21-year-old Minnesota girl, who lived under a bridge near the University of California at Los Angeles campus last year and existed on fruits and cereals while attending the university's classes, has been doing the same thing this year.

The university officials expelled her last week for making her home in the open, but she begged for another chance and got it. Helen M. Laughlin, dean of women, provided her a job in the student cafeteria, where she is earning her meals and room rent.

Miss Enerson transferred to U. C. L. A. from the University of Minnesota last year. When the school authorities discovered her mode of living they provided her a room in the women's dormitory, where she stayed until school was closed last June. Sorority house mothers provided a fund that enabled her to visit her parents for the summer months. She hitch-hiked her way back to Los Angeles to finish her senior year.

She is majoring in psychology and philosophy.

Ben Travers, Ben Williams Make Double Mischief For Doubleday-Doran.

Two novels named "Mischief," each by an author whose first name is Ben, are published by Doubleday Doran. One is a recital of embarrassing moments by Ben Travers, with an introduction by Thorne Smith, which appeared Wednesday. The other is a story of retribution by Ben Ames Williams, able yet ceaseless Saturday Evening Post author, which will come out November 6. Before the publishers are through with this brace of novels, their accounting department will have mischief enough.

Ernest Hemingway dedicates his book of short stories, "Winner Take Nothing," to Archibald MacLeish, poet, author of "Conquistador," Pulitzer prize winner this year, and an associate editor of the magazine Fortune. Out of 14 stories in the book, 9 have never been published before. The others appeared in Scribner's. The house of Scribner issues the book today.

A man who has published hundreds of popular songs, Edward B. Marks, is to have his recently written history of music-publishing issued by the Viking Press next spring. The title is "They All Sang."

A daughter of Charles M. Flandrau, St. Paul newspaper editor and author of two classics—"The Diary of a Freshman" in the eighties and "Viva Mexico!" in the 'teens—would be sure to write soundly and gracefully. One of her short-stories won a place in O'Brien's Best for 1933, and she has just finished a novel—"Indeed This Flesh"—which Smith & Haas will publish in the late fall. In the meantime, she goes to Mexico for the winter.

Down to the Sea With La Farge.

A novel, "LONG PENNANT," by Oliver La Farge; Houghton Mifflin, $2.50.

Reading "Long Pennant" is very like drinking a tall glass of Green Mountain applejack, a sip at a time. One's emotions are mixed—there is some disappointment, there are moments of vagueness followed by blindingly simple clarity. There follows a period of calm. Then a cumulative reaction, and the full-jolted effect comes in with a bang!

Jonas E. Dodge, master of the private armed brig Glimpse of Chogs Cove, R. I., has captured a sloop in Southern waters. He put four of his men, Waterman, Hall, Brown and Johnson, in charge to sail to port. In a hurricane, Johnson is lost. The sloop founders near Mexico, where Waterman dies. Hall and Brown, castaways, become native kings, leave for New Orleans in a makeshift boat and, after five years of wandering, return to Chogs Cove.

In the meantime, on the Glimpse, John Disney and his nephew, Jeremiah, both Bible-quoting puritans, and Ezekiel Nyas, a Gay Head Indian, are sailing for Chogs Cove, via New Orleans. Jeremiah remains there, becomes a drunkard, returns four years later to Chogs Cove to plague Dodge and Disney with threats of blackmail based on his secret knowledge that the prize sloop had been an American vessel, which would make them all pirates. Hall and Brown clear the case when it is discovered they had burned the paper of registry. In the final chapter, "all hands" meet for a final reckoning.

There are portions of the book which deserve high ranking in literature—the hurricane as it strikes the sloop; Jeremiah's downfall by strong drink, chapter remarkably executed; Tripoli Sam Hall's attempt to bedevil the drunken Jeremiah; the meeting of Brown and Susannah, his promised, after five years at sea; a Western trapper's evening with Hall and Brown in New Orleans.

La Farge seems to need a broad canvas to work on. His use of the subconscious combined with straight quotation, both in Chogs Cove dialect, will be found somewhat disconcerting. Breaking the narrative to follow the individual fortunes of the characters causes the tempo of the story to appear jerky and makes it necessary to turn back pages several times in order to determine time relationships.

The book is rampant with color. The author, at home among seafaring folk on land or at sea, will rank well in "Long Pennant" with Conrad and McFee.

DON BLOCH.

M. Poirot in Action.

A mystery, "13 AT DINNER," by Agatha Christie; Dodd Mead, $2.

French psycho-detective versus Scotland Yard, M. Hercule Poirot's own unique methods of dealing with suspected persons set off against the usual deduction of the English school—that is the basis of Agatha Christie's new tale. Not only must M. Poirot account for motive and opportunity, but he does not rest satisfied until he feels the "suspectee" is psychologically capable of perpetrating the particular type of crime in hand.

The story is distinctive in its characters and background. Corpus delicti is Lord Edgeware, estranged husband of a world-renowned actress, found murdered in his Regent Gate estate. In his pursuit of the criminal, M. Poirot untangles threads which lead him from stage to high society and back again. There are two additional murders before the solution of the problem.

Agatha Christie, author of "The Murder of Roger Ackroyd" and "The Blue Train," can always be relied upon for entertainment, for suspense maintained well into the final chapter. Even when the criminal is discovered, interest in the story does not drop flat. An explanation of the mental quirks of the criminal is almost as enthralling as the narrative of method.

MARY TINLEY DALY.

Buck Billings; Watt, $2.

"Ride around, little dogies,
Ride around 'em slow.
For the fiery and the snuffy are a-rarin' to go!"

So ends this yarn, which has everything you want when you crave "Westerns"—rangers, rustlers, bullets and a great breath of cattle-country air. Written by a former cowboy with a palpable delight in action.

Mischief Maker

BEN AMES WILLIAMS.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Protection Against Diphtheria.

Experience proves that if one-half the children in a given town are freshly immunized against diphtheria the disease will not become epidemic there. Cases will be imported and, from time to time, one or two other cases may develop, but the disease will not spread enough to become epidemic. In order that there should be a guarantee against diphtheria the proportion of children immunized must be reasonably well distributed throughout the town. If all the children should be immunized in one section and none in another, those in the neglected quarter would not be safe against the disease.

Protection is not indefinite. Unless there are enough immunizations each year to maintain the proportion protected at 50 per cent, epidemics can be expected. The greater the drop below one-half and the longer the low level is maintained, the greater the possibility of trouble.

While from a practical standpoint protection against diphtheria epidemics follows immunization of one-half the children of school age, safety is increased by raising the proportion of the immunized. Since diphtheria is most liable to occur in children under 6 years of age, the margin of safety is greatly broadened by immuization of the younger children—those not yet in school.

These conclusions, demonstrated elsewhere, have been confirmed by the experience of the Springfield, Ill., schools and general population. In that city just one-half of the school children have been cared for in this way, and the protected are fairly well distributed geographically as to age and also between public and parochial schools. In consequence diphtheria in that city has become of minor importance and should remain so as long as they keep to their present policy.

Such has been the experience of many other places, some of which have had no diphtheria for years in their school population, and almost none in the general population. Old-fashioned epidemics should be nothing more than a memory from now on.

The Springfield experience with scarlet fever has been satisfactory, although not up to the diphtheria standard. Other cities with good health service in the public schools have had about the same experience. The pupils of the Illinois city are very well-vaccinated against smallpox and, in consequence, that disease has not troubled them.

Their experience with chickenpox has not been so satisfactory. Chickenpox is a very mild disease and consequently has been badly neglected. Nobody knows much to do against it, and almost nothing is done. In the year 1932-33 chickenpox led all other diseases of its group in the number of pupils caused to be excluded from school. It did more than any other disease of the kind to depopulate the schoolrooms and to increase the inefficiency and per pupil per day cost of school maintenance.

Try Rowing.

E. M. H. writes: I am losing my waistline. I am a woman 54 years old, about 5 feet, 4½ inches, and weigh about 123 pounds. I am and have always been very active. About Christmas time I had a thorough examination at my doctor's. Everything was all right. But I notice my waistline is getting thick, and I do not like it. I try to hold my abdomen in and up, and do pretty well, but need something in special exercises, I think. Is there anything better than one of those small rowing machines?

Reply.

Rowing is better. When circumstances do not permit, a rowing machine is a good substitute.

Cookery Words Often Puzzle To Housewife

Barbecue, Saute, Bouillon and Other Terms Explained.

By Ruth Chambers.

"Just exactly what does 'saute' mean?" "What is a marinade?" "How does one marinate meat?" "When is meat 'barbecued,' and how is that process different from any other kind of roasting?" "What is the difference between bouillon and broth?"

Do you ever get a bit puzzled by culinary terms, yet feel hesitant about inquiring, but wishing you had asked a long time ago and got the matter cleared up?

Now Standardized.

Only recently a national committee on methods of meat cookery went into the matter of standardizing the much used but often inaccurately employed terms.

Here are the definitions given official sanction by that committee, and you need no longer worry about your cooking vocabulary:

Bake: To cook by indirect dry heat, in an oven, or in hot ashes, upon heated metal or stones. But when it is meat you are talking about, you usually say "roast." Bake is also applied to ham which has been partially cooked in water before being put in the oven.

Barbecue: To roast an animal whole or in pieces slowly on a grid-iron, spit, or over coals in a specially prepared trench. Usually barbecued meat is basted with a highly seasoned sauce.

Baste: To moisten meat while cooking to prevent drying and to add flavor. Usually pan drippings, water or water and fat are used.

Boil: To cook in liquid, usually water, which has reached the boiling point. (Meat should not be boiled, but should simmer, that is, be cooked in water a little below boiling.)

Bouillon: A French word for clear soup or broth.

Braise: You braise meat when you place it in a hot receptacle in its own juice or added liquid, such as water, milk, cream, meat stock, diluted vinegar or juices from vegetables.

Broil: To cook by direct heat from hot coals, gas flame or electric element. To grill.

Broth (also stock): Is the liquid in which meat, fish, vegetables or cereals have been cooked. It may or may not contain fat. It is a thin soup.

Consomme (again French): Is a clear, strong broth of meat and vegetables, usually made from two or more kinds of meat. It is freed from fat, clear and seasoned.

Fricassee: A dish made of fowl, veal or other meat, cut in pieces and stewed in gravy. It is usually braised.

Fry: Cook in fat.

To lard is to place strips of fat (called lardoons) on top of or insert into meat to add flavor and prevent dryness.

A marinade is an acid liquor usually seasoned and with or without oil, in which meat is allowed to stand before cooking to improve flavor and increase tenderness.

To panbroil is to cook in a hot, uncovered frying-pan, pouring off the fat as it accumulates in the pan.

To parboil is to simmer for a short time preliminary to cooking by another method.

A pot-roast is a piece of meat cooked by braising.

Saute is another French word from the verb meaning to jump, and it signifies the frequent turning of meat browned quickly in a small amount of fat. We use it to mean frying in a small amount of fat, as distinguished from deep-fat frying. For saute the committee prefers the use of the term "fry," which has the sanction of long usage by American housewives.

To stew is to cook in simmering heat, while a stew is a dish made of small pieces of meat simmered in liquid, with or without vegetables.

Oxford Co-Eds Take To Powder 'n Paint

Brothers Decide Woman Should Be Decorative.

Oxford, England, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Oxford woman undergraduate, "however plain she may be," was cheered today by the Oxford University paper, the Isis, for "at least trying to make the best of herself."

"The other day while passing through the streets of Oxford we saw here and there painted faces," said the Isis.

"It was a happy sign, and later in a restaurant when we saw an undergraduate positively powdering her nose we could scarcely check our applause.

"If nature has withheld her gifts, artifice may legitimately rectify the omission. Women, even undergraduates, owe to the human face to be as decorative as possible."

Russian Dressing.

1-3 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon chopped dill pickle
1 tablespoon chopped olives
1 tablespoon chopped sweet pickle
2 tablespoons chili sauce
1 tablespoon catsup
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Sculptress Designs Smart Chapeaux

"Nothing builds up a woman's morale like a new and flattering hat," says Lenore Kroll, who deserted her profession as sculptress to design hats for American women. Because of her understanding of facial structures and the relationship of the face's features, she has been able to create designs that bring out the best points of the wearer.

Bridal Gowns Of Long Ago Worn at Fete

Laces, Satins, Calicos, Taffetas Revived for a Day at Orange Party.

Century-old bridal gowns, so small around the waist that only children can get into them today, were exhibited yesterday at the Orange County annual achievement day celebration in the Orange Baptist Church.

The embroidered wedding dress, worn a hundred years ago by Miss Susan Ott, of Harrisonburg, when she became the bride of Joseph Goode, also of Harrisonburg, was modeled yesterday by little Jean Young, of Rhoadesville.

Black and white calico in a spinning-wheel design lined a striped purple silk dress, worn by Mrs. Lafayette Young, Rhoadesville. It is the property of Mrs. Eva Simpson, Tatum, Va.

Another eighteenth century gown, of stiff, black taffeta, was displayed by Mrs. J. H. Hume, in whose family it has been for four generations.

A maroon and white striped dimity, made in 1840, was worn by Miss Rosa Utz, of Barboursville. The owner is Mrs. J. A. Ehert, of Ehert, Va.

The gay nineties was represented by a bridal dress with leg-o-mutton sleeves, which was modeled by Mrs. R. F. Garnett, of Barboursville. With this gown was worn a leghorn hat, trimmed with ostrich plumes. Mrs. Garnett's mother wore this costume on her wedding day, September 19, 1894.

The style review, called "The Passing of Fashion," has been arranged by the Orange County County Homemakers Association.

Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Lee Utz, Barboursville; Miss Janie Wright, Mine Run; Mrs. James Haliday, Rapidan; Mrs. Robert Smith, Somerset; Mrs. Seldon Grafton, Somerset; Mrs. Thomas Woolfolk, Lahore, and Mrs. J. C. B. Sampson, Gordonsville.

National Symphony Honors Two Patrons

Miss Clapp and Mr. Turner Named Vice Presidents.

Miss Alice J. Clapp, of 1309 Sixteenth street, and Mrs. William J. Turner, of Philadelphia, were made honorary vice presidents of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, following action of the board of directors last week. Their names had been proposed at an earlier meeting.

Miss Clapp has been an enthusiastic supporter of the symphony since it was organized here two years ago, and has been active in the orchestra's affairs. She is a member of the women's committee.

Mr. Turner is a well-known patron of the arts, and has furnished substantial aid to the orchestra's sustaining fund for the past two seasons.

The orchestra is hoping Mr. Turner will come to Washington Thursday to hear the first of the orchestra's "symphony" series concert. This event will begin at 8:30 p. m. at Constitution Hall. It is expected that Mrs. Roosevelt will attend. Many social leaders and members of the diplomatic corps have engaged boxes for the occasion.

Rare Paintings Shown In Hagerstown Museum

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.). A group of paintings and drawings from the private collection of Mrs. John W. Garrett, of Baltimore, wife of the former United States Ambassador to Italy, are being exhibited at the Washington County Museum of Fine Arts. The works are by some of the most famous modern American and European artists, and were acquired for the most part while the Garretts were in Rome.

Two other exhibitions are being featured at the same time; one a collection of prints from the art exposition of the Olympic games held in Los Angeles and the other a group of paintings by modern American and European artists selected from the collection of the local museum.

Exhibit of Melcher Art Draws Hundreds

Fredericksburg People Flock to Corcoran Gallery.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.). Several hundred Fredericksburgers have gone to the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington to visit the memorial exhibition of the works of Gari Melchers, internationally known artist who made his home in this community until his recent death.

Occupying four rooms in the Corcoran Gallery and including in all 109 different exhibits, the display represents more than half a century of Mr. Melcher's efforts. Included are portraits, landscapes, religious subjects, figures, mothers and children, still life subjects, nudes, imaginative works and church interiors. There are water colors, etchings, and drawings as well as oils. Many scenes and faces from this region are included.

One of the most complete displays of Mr. Melcher's art ever exhibited, it is called by Corcoran gallery officials "undoubtedly one of the most comprehensive one-man exhibitions, both as to field and to medium, ever held in the Corcoran gallery."

Long Sleeve Dinner Gown Gains Vogue

Casino Red, Olive Green, Rust, Among Favored Tints; Velvet Much Used.

The dinner dress with long sleeves is growing noticeably in popularity as the fall season advances into winter. Many women prefer it to the actual evening gown, except for ultra formal occasions.

Casino red, olivine green, copper, rust, and terra cotta tones are splendid for these dinner dresses. Of course a great number of them are in black, sometimes entirely so, sometimes with touches of white or lemon or dusty pink.

Velvets, naturally, head the list of favored materials. But heavy sheer crepes and mossy crepes are not far behind velvet in the fashion race.

The cowl back dress with cord girdle, exemplifying the monkish influence, is sensational in its simplicity. It is best in black or blackberry velvet. Dull purplish shades are very good also.

The Family Marketer

Father Frost Nips Noses as Fishermen Make Big Haul.

The Marketer pulled her coat collar up and sat down on a plank at the waterfront.

"It's cold today," she appealed to the fisherman for sympathy, "how is it down on the Chesapeake?"

"We had ice on our decks this morning." He rubbed his hands together.

The Marketer peered into the bottom of the boat. Piles of chilly-looking fish were dying in their cracked-ice beds.

"About how many pounds of fish do you get a week?" she asked.

The fisherman pushed his hat on the back of his head and squinted his eyes thoughtfully.

"About 10,000 pounds per boat, I reckon."

"And do you sell all that in a week?"

He laughed.

"Well, not quite, we eat about three pounds ourselves."

This fisherman is selling as a special today pan trout for 5 cents a pound; his butterfish is three pounds for 25 cents; oysters, shucked, 35 cents a quart. The fish are uncleaned.

The Marketer's feet were getting cold. She decided to go farther inland to the waterfront stalls.

In one of these she found tiny smoked boneless herring for 30 cents a pound. The marketman offered her one and as she ate it she had a mental picture of a big mug of foaming beer and a juicy pickle. Perfect combination! Why don't you try them together some day?

Smoked Labrador herring at the same stall is 10 cents apiece, smoked whitefish, 35 cents a pound. You can get these last two fish at a northwest market for the same prices.

Here is a way to cook smoked fish so that it leaves no odor. Wrap the fish in a piece of heavy butcher's paper, tucking in the ends so that no steam can escape. Place it in the oven and bake for about 15 to 20 minutes or until the paper is browned and crackling. Remove from oven, unwrap, cut off head and tail, put it on a platter, and put the waste and paper quickly into the garbage can. No odor, no mess.

You can get the ginger cake for today's menu at a downtown market for 5 cents a square. If you want to vary the dessert, you can buy individual gingerbread cakes at a downtown bakery for 3 for 10 cents, or 40 cents a dozen, or canned gingerbread at the chain stores for 23 cents a pound can. And with hot gingerbread, what is better than a generous slice of cream cheese? Cream cheese, from a market dairyman, 40 cents a pound.

Scalloped Oysters.

1 pint oysters
4 tablespoons oyster liquor
2 tablespoons milk
½ cup stale bread crumbs
1 cup cracker crumbs
½ cup melted butter
Salt
Pepper

Mix bread and cracker crumbs in the melted butter. Put thin layer in bottom of buttered baking dish, cover with oysters and sprinkle with salt and pepper; add half each oyster liquor and milk. Repeat and cover top with remaining crumbs. Bake 30 minutes in hot oven (450 degrees F.). Never allow more than two layers of oysters. If three layers are used, the middle layer will be undone, while the others are properly cooked. If desired, sprinkle each layer with grated nutmeg or mace.

when you have a modern automatic gas range!

"Over the fence" conversations—hasty little moments of human indulgence—have almost completely disappeared in this age of automatic home devices. They have been supplanted with whole afternoons, hours of freedom which modern housewives enjoy in recreation or the pursuit of more gainful tasks.

It's the modern gas range that largely accounts for this new freedom, through its completely automatic operation. Working and watching have disappeared. Hot oppressive kitchens have disappeared. Meals are now merely placed in the oven. The gas range starts and stops itself by simple directions from the cook. Another automatic control maintains exact cooking temperatures. And insulation keeps the heat in the oven where it belongs.

When a housewife enjoys complete kitchen freedom, and really becomes a modern housewife, you'll know that she has a modern automatic gas range.

Stocks Droop 1.5 Points on Light Trading

Profit-Taking Uncovers Quiet Support; Sales, 1,218,620 Shares.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Speculative markets today apparently decided that recent exertions on the side of rising prices had gone far toward discounting dollar depreciation resulting from the Administration's new monetary policy.

Stocks and commodities slid off. For the former the decline was leisurely and few prominent shares were off much more than a point net.

Fluctuations of the foreign exchange market were relatively narrow so far as dollars were concerned. The day's R. F. C. price for gold, $31.54 was 18 cents above yesterday's and also over the London quotations; when it was announced our currency sagged a trifle, then steadied.

Dollar Shows Strength.

Its action, on the whole, indicated considerable stability, which was reassuring to those who were looking for more persistent depreciation.

Lacking incentive to increase their recent gains, stocks settled back into something of a rut, and many professional traders stood aside to see whether a technical reaction was brewing.

Profit-taking sales in most instances uncovered quiet support, but with volume reduced to 1,218,620 shares, the market obviously was in no hurry about making a decision as to its immediate course.

On Losing List.

American Telephone, Allied Chemical and Case dropped about 3 points net. Consolidated Gas of New York firmed when its annual dividend basis was cut to $3 from $3.40, but eased a point later.

North American, Public Service of New Jersey, Westinghouse, Du Pont, American Smelting, McIntyre, Alaska Juneau, Sears Roebuck, New York Central, American Tobacco "B," Southern Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio were off in the neighborhood of 1 to 1½ points.

General Motors yielded slightly. United States Industrial Alcohol and National Distillers improved a couple of points and Homestake hopped up 20½ net.

Exemptions in Retail Code

Mark First Great Concession In Blanketing All Business

By Ralph West Robey.

Comparatively little attention has been given to the wholesale exemptions granted under the NRA retail code as announced Sunday night. This is, nevertheless, one of the most significant developments in the recovery program in many weeks. Had there been fewer other spectacular developments—the new monetary policy, progress of the Russian negotiations, fall of the French government, effect of the new gold value on prices, to mention only the most outstanding—it is quite probable the retail code would have held the limelight. This is because the granting of these exemptions represents the first great concession in the determination to bring all business under codes.

The exemptions, it will be recalled, apply to small establishments. More specifically, no independent retail store need comply with the code which has not more than five employes and which is located in a town with a population of not more than 2,500. Obviously, the widest effects of this will be in agricultural regions. In fact, there is little doubt that the growing dissatisfaction with the NRA among farmers had an important bearing in reaching the decision to make this concession.

Development Speaks Badly For Future of the NRA.

Regardless of the specific reasons for making the exemptions, however, it is clear that the action does not speak well for the future of the NRA. Rather, it more nearly indicates a trend toward disintegration of the attempt to organize all business under codes and through Governmental supervision of these to subject our entire industrial and trade organization to so-called economic planning. Further, it is a compromise which, it would seem, would be almost certain to have reverberations, for other groups of business men will conclude that they too should not be subjected to the higher charges involved in working under codes.

Granting the exemptions, in other words, is an admission that NRA does not carry within itself the means for offsetting the additional costs. Originally, it is always well to bear in mind, it was maintained that the plan did possess this self-regenerative quality—that the payment of higher wages and the increase of employment would give an enlarged purchase power, which would enable business organizations not only to cover the additional costs, but to make profits as well.

Super-Perpetual Motion Idea Now Abandoned.

Now it appears that this super-perpetual motion concept of what makes prosperity has been abandoned. In its place apparantly is a growing realization that a workable balance must be kept in the economic system or otherwise buying dries up under higher prices. The recognition of this fact is a distinct forward step in the recovery program. If it is carried to its logical conclusion we shall get to our ultimate goal much faster.

Before this revision of ideas becomes really effective, however, there will have to be rather wholesale revisions of codes. Price fixing, for example, will have to be taken out of them. All provisions that tend to assure the economic existence of the inefficient, too, must be eliminated. Carrying out of the program, accordingly, will not be easy. Going through with the changes is essential, nevertheless, if the NRA is not to become a deterrent, rather than an aid, to steady business recovery.

Bond Market Drifts Lower In Quiet Sales

Government Loans Rally; Trading Volume Drops to $10,108,000.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—With the exception of United States Government securities, which rallied moderately, the bond market drifted irregularly lower today in quiet trading.

Sales totaled $10,108,000, par value, against $11,662,000 yesterday, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans sagged three-tenths of a point.

While there were exceptions to the generally declining trend, both high grade and secondary groups displayed a nervous tone throughout, as traders and investors showed a disposition to await results from the administration's gold-control policy.

Among the more active losers of fractions to a point or more were some bonds of Santa Fe, Union Pacific, American Telephone, Baltimore & Ohio, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Consolidated Gas, Delaware & Hudson, Illinois Central, International Telephone, Midvale Steel, New York Central, North American, Pennsylvania Railroad, Portland General Electric, Reading, Warner Bros., and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Similar gainers included issues of American I. G. Chemical, Columbia Gas, Goodyear, Goodrich, International Paper, Postal Telegraph, Texas Corporation, St. Joseph Lead, and Shell Union Oil.

The Federal list was not unusually brisk, but recoveries of 1-32d to 4-32ds of a point predominated.

Foreign obligations were mixed. The feature of this section was the heavy buying of Swedish 5½s at a gain of 1½ points. Interest in this maturity was attributed to reports that Sweden was considering refunding the issue into kroner bonds. Loans of Dutch East Indies, France, Belgium and Cuba lost 1 to 3 or more points. Italian Kingdom 7s were in demand at an advance of 2½ points.

Wool Market.

Boston, Oct. 26 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—Sentiment in the Boston wool market shows a little improvement. Buyers are beginning to make some inquiries and a little wool has been bought. Good French combing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags have realized 80@81 cents scoured basis, steady compared with prices for the past several weeks.

Demand in most houses, however, is very quiet but encouragement is noticed as a result of inquiries stimulated by price advances reported in Australia in the past few days.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Texas oil production will be "cut back" on November 1 to 875,000 barrels a day, Railroad Commissioners Ernest O. Thompson and C. V. Terrell today told the American Petroleum Institute.

"This cut back," Thompson said, "will comply with Secretary Ickes' order." He referred to the oil quota for Texas set by the Secretary of the Interior, who also asked that production in the immediate future be reduced to make up for over production in recent months.

Curb's Rising Is Checked by Selling Drive

Losses Held to Narrow Range; Trading Cut to 266,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Moderate realizing sales checked the recent rise on the curb exchange today. After milling about in the initial trading, stocks drifted quietly lower, but closing results represented mostly minor concessions.

Oils were comparatively steady, Creole Petroleum gaining a small fraction in considerable activity. Humble also closed a fraction higher. Utilities, metals and alcohols were in light supply. Newmont Mining lost 2 points while shares closing about a point or so lower included American Gas & Electric, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Electric Bond & Share and Hiram Walker. Lake Shore Mines halved a 1-point drop.

Aluminum of America sagged nearly 4 points in a light turnover, while the Swift issues were marked down more than a point. Parker Rust Proof and Pan American Airways were isolated firm spots, rising a point or more each.

Transfers declined to approximately 266,000 shares compared with 343,000 yesterday.

Belgian Congo Gold Deposits To Be Exploited

Exploitation of newly discovered deposits of the Kilo Moto gold mines in the Belgian Congo is expected to begin in the second half of the coming year, according to Acting Commercial Attache L. W. Hunt, Brussels, in a report to the Commerce Department.

Some fifteen years ago, the report states, the gold reserves of these mines were estimated at 12,-000 kilograms. Since that time, 60,000 kilograms of gold have been mined, and the reserves as of December 31, 1932, were officially estimated at 44,000 kilos.

Researches which have been carried on during the past two and a half years to the west of Kilo, are said to indicate that the gold veins of the Kilo Moto mines are prolonged considerably towards the West. Opening up the new deposits, it has been stated locally, will not require any important new investment of capital, because of the nearness of the Kilo installations and the fact that there is a road within three kilometers of the deposits.

No estimates as to the amount of gold in the newly discovered deposits have been made as yet, but undoubtedly they will add considerably to the reserves already known.

Acacia Mutual Business Cited As Upturn Sign

Potomac Electric Power Income Is Increased in September.

Noteworthy progress in Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.'s business, "which unquestionably reflects the substantially improved tone of the general economic situation," have been reported to the board of directors of the company by William Montgomery, president, following a trip in the interest of the organization, which took him as far as the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Montgomery has informed the directors, and backed his statement with statistics covering the first nine months' business of the company, that his contacts throughout his inspection tour convinced him of the important basic betterment which has taken place, and which is continuing apace.

"During the first nine months of this year," Mr. Montgomery stated, "assets of Acacia increased by considerably more than $2,000,000. The already excellent liquid position of the company has been enhanced still further by the placing of these funds either in United States Government bonds or cash in bank.

Payments to Policyholders.

"In that same period, Acacia paid to living policyholders and beneficiaries a total of more than $4,000,000. In addition to that sum, more than $900,000 was paid in dividends, the rate of payment of which Acacia maintained consistently.

"I have returned from my extensive business trip soundly encouraged by what I saw and heard. Within our own field organization morale and confidence are heartenlingly high. Our workers are viewing the future with intelligent optimism and are leaving no stone unturned to aid in bringing about complete national recovery.

"As an example of the energy being put forth, and the results that expenditure of energy is achieving, the record of our Los Angeles branch may be cited. In that branch, 27 men have written an application a week for 34 weeks without interruption; a remarkable achievement in consistent production.

"I feel that this is important, not only as it affects Acacia but also as it is a reflection of general conditions. Distinctly, improvement is under way. I personally believe that by continued strong effort, wholehearted cooperation and thoughtful planning, the upward tendency can be maintained and accelerated."

Power Net Increases.

Net income of Potomac Electric Power Co. in September was $364,019.27, as compared with $327,938.69 for the month a year ago. This comparative gain of $36,080.58 is shown in the company's statement of operations for last month as filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. For the first nine months of the current year, the company's net income is $3,315,133.25 as compared with one of $3,278,900.89 for the corresponding period in 1932, an increase of $36,232.36.

The net income item of Washington Railway & Electric Co.'s operating statement for last month also filed yesterday with the commission, reveals a deficit of $4.93, in comparison with one of $22,679.83 in the same month last year. Net income for the nine months of 1933 amounts to $1,259,543.21, as contrasted with net income of $1,297,557.61 for the similar comparative period a year ago.

Tinplate Yield In Germany Is Rising Slightly

German tin-plate production in August reached a figure never before attained even in prosperous years, according to advices from the American consulate general, Berlin, made public by the Commerce Department. Total output in that month amounted to 21,500 metric tons, compared with 19,400 tons in July, and 17,250 tons in June.

During the first eight months of 1933 production of tin-plate in Germany amounted to 134,200 metric tons, against 86,900 tons in the corresponding period of 1932.

The favorable development in the German tin-plate industry is chiefly due to the increased export trade, which amounted to 80,600 metric tons in the eight-month period of the current year, compared with 49,960 during the first eight months of 1932.

German tin plate, the report declares, is displacing the British product in many foreign markets. Domestic consumption has also considerably expanded as a result of larger demand by the automobile and can industries.

German tin-plate manufacturers continue to use two and often three shifts, the report shows.

Business Notes.

October earnings of factory workers are maintaining their September levels, the Federal Reserve Board reported today, despite a decrease in activity and total number of employed.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—An increase of 18.1 per cent in operating income over 1932 was announced today after compilation of reports from 17 railroads for September. The total was $18,642,000 for the month.

Boston, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Department of Agriculture today announced improvement in the Boston wool market with both inquiries and buying.

(Associated Press.)

A favorable trade balance of $13,000,000 for America in September, compared with an unfavorable balance of $24,000,000 in August, was reported today. Higher domestic prices and better exchange rates were assigned as reasons.

Plant Produces Cheap Motor Fuel

Bello Horizonte, Brazil, Oct. 26 (AP).—Motor alcohol from the manioc plant, a staple food product in Brazil, can be produced cheaper than gasoline, says a report of the Minas Geraes state experimental factory in Divinopolis.

Dr. Antonio Gravata, director of the plant, which has been operating three months, says that a ton of raw manioc produces about 50 gallons of alcohol.

Tobacco Men Ready to Aid Price Inquiry

Danville, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Officials of the Danville Tobacco Association were prepared today to give full cooperation to F. G. Powell, representing the Federal Department of Agriculture, who has come into the Old Belt to make an investigation of discrepancies in tobacco prices.

The investigation was requested this week by Representative Thomas G. Burch, of the fifth district, who conferred here last week with farmers on the market situation.

The initial investigation is centering on the South Boston market, but all of the centers in the Old Belt, where tobacco will be sold, will be visited and a report filed on each one.

It has been indicated by the Department of Agriculture that the results of the investigation will not be made public immediately, nor will comparative prices between rival markets be given.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Prices of leaf tobacco on the Petersburg market this season are said to be the best in a number of years. The sales of bright leaf are also heavy. Some of the leaf has brought as high as $30 per 100 pounds, and the average price is $17.50 per $100 pounds. Growers are highly pleased, and it is expected that Petersburg will sell approximately 4,000,000 pounds at the warehouses before the season ends.

Bank of Poland Cuts Rates.

Warsaw, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Bank of Poland today cut the discount rate from 6 to 5 per cent.

Soft Coal Production Put at 7,100,000 Tons

The National Coal Association, from incomplete car loading reports from the railroads, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended October 21 as approximately 7,100,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding weeks: 1932, 7,850,000 tons; 1931, 8,230,000 tons.

The report of the Bureau of Mines shows production of 5,660,000 tons for the week ended October 7, and 6,710,000 for the week ended October 14, 1933.

Sales of U.S. Autos Gain In Argentina

American motor vehicles maintained their supremacy in Argentina in the first eight months of 1933 and noteworthy gains were made over the low record made in 1932, reports to the Commerce Department show.

In August, 1933, 613 passenger cars and 466 trucks were imported from the United States, compared with 25 and 146, respectively, in August, 1932. Imports of European vehicles numbereed 40 passenger cars and 29 trucks, against 58 and 2 in August, 1932.

During the first eight months of 1933, motored vehicle imports into Argentina were as follows: American passenger cars, 4,115; trucks, 1,574; European passenger cars, 470; trucks, 129. Imports in the corresponindg period of 1932 were, Amreican passenger cars, 3,645; trucks, 249; European passenger cars, 364; trucks, 35.

Strafford Dairy Cows Outpoint Competitors

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Stafford Farm Dairy's 14 Guernsey cows, owned by J. C. Gordon, jr., led the Dairy Herd Association for September with 697.1 pounds of milk and 33.16 pounds of butter fat.

The next four farms were: Sherwood Forrest Farm with 24 cows, 547.5 pounds of milk and 27.53 pounds of butter fat; James McGee with 32 cows, 560.1 pounds of milk and 27.14 pounds of butter fat; Snowden Farm with 18 cows, 501 pounds of milk and 25.17 pounds of butter fat; W. S. Dickinson with 17 cows, 539.5 pounds of milk and 24.82 pounds of butter fat.

The cow making the highest record in the association was Rose, a registered Guernsey owned by Sherwood Forest Farm. She made a record of 903 pounds of milk and 55.1 pounds of butter fat. Rose was followed by No. 66, a grade Jersey, owned by the A. W. Embrey estate, who made 804 pounds of milk and 53.9 pounds of butter fat.

The 40 and 50 pounds butter fat cows and their owners were: Levert Graves with 33 cows, seven 40 pounds; Sherwood Forest Farm with 24 cows, six 40 pounds, one 50 pounds; A. W. Embrey Estate with 53 cows, five 40 pounds one 50 pounds; James McGee with 32 cows, two 40 pounds; Stafford Farm Dairy with 14 cows, one 40 pounds; W. S. Bank Clearings Rise To $4,674,939,000

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Bank clearings at leading American cities for the week ended October 25 totaled $4,674,939,000, an increase of 10.4 per cent over a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today. New York City clearings rose 11.2 per cent, while the aggregate for cities outside was 8.7 per cent above the same 1932 week.

The total exceeded that of the preceding week by $264,519,000. Clearings so far in October, said the agency, continue larger than those for any other month this year except July.

French Bank's Gold Reduced By $12,626,000

Paris, Oct. 26 (AP).—The great gold reserve of the Bank of France has decreased 214,000,000 francs (approximately $12,626,000), it was revealed in figures released today.

For the seventh consecutive week the bank has lost gold.

The figures appeared to confirm the warning of former Premier Edouard Daladier to Parliament last Friday that 200,000,000 francs have been withdrawn in a single day, indicating the franc was shaky.

The gold reserve still is 81,786,000,000 francs ($4,825,374,000 approximately), making a 101 per cent banking for bank notes.

Discount Rate Unchanged.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The New York Federal Reserve Bank today announced no change in its rediscount rate, which last week was reduced to 2 per cent from 2½.

Western Mustang Tamed for Work

Shoshoni, Wyo., Oct. 26 (AP).—The wild horse, defiant denizen of the broad expanses of central and western Wyoming, herds of which were once slaughtered wholesale and exported as cheap meat, is coming back to his heritage.

Now, so great is the demand for horses as the result of the decline of power farming, ranchers are finding it profitable to grade out good stock from the wild herds and ship them to Midwestern and Southern farms.

Ranchers have organized their cowboys into parties to round up the best horses in the wild herds, break them, and ship them to the country's horse markets. Reports to the chief brand inspector of the Wyoming Stock Growers Association show the chief billings to points in Missouri, Tennessee, South Carolina, and Texas.

The wild horse herds originated from strays which wandered from large ranches many years ago.

Forest Fire Damage Is Smallest in 2 Years

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 26 (AP).—The smallest area of woodlands reported damaged by forest fires in North Carolina in two years was reported for September, the State department of conservation and development reported today.

Only 359 acres of land were burned over, compared with 378 acres in August, but the September damage was estimated at $2,433, as compared with $1,527 in August. Careless smokers caused 7 of the 19 September woods fires in counties cooperating in forest-fire control work.

Wheat Values Cut as Dealers Blame Gold

Small Metal Price Boost Is Disappointing; Other Grains Drop.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Three cents a bushel tumble in wheat prices today went hand in hand with selling based largely on but 18 cents advance of gold.

A good many traders took the position that the 18 cents official advance of gold today was not enough to stimulate any aggressive buying of wheat or other cereals, but instead appeared an incentive to realize on holdings.

Extremely large Russian shipments of wheat acted also as a weight on values.

Wheat Closes Unstable.

Wheat closed unstable at about the day's bottom level, 2¼ to 3 cents under yesterday's finish; corn, unchanged to 1 cent lower; oats, 1⅝ to 2 cents off, and provisions unchanged to 20 cents down.

Disappointment over the fact that the Washington gold quotation today was less than in various quarters had been hoped for gave wheat prices here a jolt at the outset.

The disturbing effect was intensified by weakness of the Liverpool wheat market, where enlarged shipments from Russia attracted much attention. The Russian total this week was 1,824,000 bushels, compared to 560,000 a week previous, with the Black Sea region as a whole showing 2,600,000 bushels wheat exports the present week against 557,000 the corresponding week in 1932.

Vigor is Lacking.

Neither in wheat nor corn did price rallies at any time display much vigor. Word that the Washington administration would loan 50 cents a bushel on No. 2 grades of corn had only a transient stimulating influence, and was practically confined to December corn contracts, the only ones that were quoted below the loan basis. Easterners bought some wheat at times when prices dipped, but backed away on upturns.

Prospective curtailment of rural offerings of corn led to the largest corn shipping demand experienced in a long while. Call for oats, however, was relatively small.

Provisions reflected upturns of hog values, but subsequently went downhill with grains.

U.S. Holding Export Sales To Mexico

While advancing prices have curtailed the sale of textiles and steel products in the Mexican market, they have not seriously affected American trade as a whole in that area, according to Assistant Commercial Attache Robert G. Glover, Mexico City, in a report to the Commerce Department.

With price advances ranging from 50 to 100 per cent in various textile items, competition with European textiles is almost impossible, the report states.

In connection with steel products, the report shows that American tin plate prices have advanced by about 10 per cent, a development which has brought this product within range of successful European competition. During recent months, it is pointed out, German manufacturers have secured some fairly large orders. German interests are reported to be exerting every effort to capture the Mexican market for black sheets and are offering price concessions. American cast-iron pipe is practically out of this market, prices on both the British and Japanese products being markedly below American quotations.

American trade with Mexico in electrical and industrial machinery, agricultural equipment, automobiles, electrical refrigerators and radios is too firmly entrenched to be seriously affected by temporary price fluctuations, according to the report. Since the United States went off the gold standard, importations of American hardware into Mexico have increased more than any other line. With the dollar at a discount of between 35 and 38 per cent, Assistant Commercial Attache Glover points out, United States manufacturers have had a decided advantage over German producers who have been the chief suppliers to Mexico in the past several years.

Dry Goods Get Best Upward Push in Years

Operators of Plants See Profits in Spite of Production Cuts.

New York, Oct. 26.—After dragging along during the first three months of the year at the bottom position of nearly a quarter of a century, the revival of retail distribution and the quickening in the long deferred calls for spring and summer merchandise in wholesale markets brought a restoration of confidence to the entire dry goods trade in April.

By the end of May, this activity had been extended to the broadest rate in the history of peace time, with prices and wages rising rapidly, production increasing and sales pushing far ahead of output.

Expansion progressed at an even more rapid rate during June, causing mills and their agents to decline much of the contract business tendered. Textiles had suffered a longer and more complete liquidation than many other lines, so that when confidence and demand revived the uplift was pronounced.

Production in July.

July witnessed the inauguration of the national recovery act in the cotton goods division—the first code to be adopted—and right up to July 17, when it became operative, production was at its highest for nearly two years.

After that date output commenced to taper down to a 40-hour week basis, with many mills operating two sets of workers over a period of 80 hours each week. Production, distribution and consumption have continued so much above the level of a year ago and prospects for the holiday trade have become so promising that many firms are counting on ending the year with a fair profit.

Even though business during the remainder of the year should show only a slight gain over the 1932 sales, profit margins will be sizable, because of the good results in the second and third quarters, according to a survey of the dry goods trade, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Production Near Capacity.

The substantial volume of textile output thus far this year is being consumed, as inventory reports give no threats of congestion in the immediate future.

Much of the current business in first hands, however, has to do with goods for a new spring season, although needs for immediate sales are reflected clearly in the many requests for prompt shipments. An outstanding feature of production is in the rayon division, where manufacturers have been forced to allot their output to insure satisfactory deliveries and to meet trade requirements.

Manufacturers of woolen goods continue at about the same high rate that characterized production during the summer months, although demand for finished goods has been somewhat lighter since October 1. Many mills already have spring orders in hand to carry current schedules through the holiday period.

Strikes Handicap Silk.

The silk trade has suffered from the severe strikes in dyeing and finishing plants, yet the cleaning up of low-priced and low-quality converted goods has left the market in much better shape than it has been in for a long time.

Production in the cotton goods division has been aided by active buying of print cloths, broadcloths, and some other convertibles, at a time when the markets were weakening steadily, following lower cotton prices and lighter demand.

Many large mills now are sold ahead from two to three months. Improvement in the sales of fine and fancy cottons has supplied that division with sufficient business for the last quarter of the year. The colored goods division is well occupied on work-shirt and work-suit fabrics, play clothes for children, men's trouserings, flannels and such staples as denims and checks.

Largest Sales in Two Years.

For the first nine months of the current year, total sales of wholesalers exceeded the comparative figures of 1932 by at least 50 per cent. During the first two months of the year, sales were below normal, but during some of the months which followed, sales frequently ran as high as 70 to 100 per cent above those for the corresponding months a year ago.

There were many delays in filling orders during this period, caused by the sold-up condition in some of the staple lines. From May 1 until the middle of August, sales of leading wholesalers reached the highest volume in two years. Early demand was for piece goods and staples, with the heavier flannels and knit goods predominating now. Stocks are in good shape to take care of fill-ins.

July was the outstanding month of the year for retailers, both in volume and profits. August and September did not continue the higher record established for July, but since the first of the current month, demand in many divisions has been stronger. Distribution has been chiefly in staples, such as prints, muslins, sheetings, flannels, hosiery, underwear and blankets. While staples marked at medium prices have been selling better than fancy goods, there has been a noticeable increase in the demand for the better qualities of merchandise during the last 30 days.

Marl Beds Discovered.

Luray, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—C. R. Weast, of Elkton, 20 miles south of Luray, has discovered marl beds on his lands that promise cheaper fertilizers for farmers of the Shenandoah Valley and throughout the country. Recent developments show that the marl has been found to extend from 18 to 20 feet in depth.

4,500 Bushels of Tree Seeds.

Bristol, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Collection of 4,500 bushels of tree seed from the forest lands of this section, to be used in reforestation of Tennessee Valley areas has been completed, it was announced today at the local offices of the Unaka National Forest.

Warmer, Rain Is Prediction For D.C. Today

Eastern Coast and South Shiver, While Midwest Is Comfortable.

Washingtonians shivering in cold blasts yesterday continued last night to be convinced that winter had made a decisive debut.

But the Weather Bureau said there is a brief respite in store. "Not so cold," is the forecast for the district this forenoon, with rain later.

Nation-wide October temperature lows were registered as snow blanketed sections of northern New York and gales whistled over the Atlantic seaboard. At Saranac Lake, N. Y., the mercury stopped at 8 degrees, the coldest October day there in 10 years.

New Jersey had the coldest October 26 in the history of weather bureaus. Maryland likewise shivered in unusual cold.

Southern cities experienced unusual cold. The Middle West enjoyed clear, warm weather.

Gray Veterans Fight Marker

Grant-Lee Memorial Is Opposed by Georgia Confederates.

Valdosta, Ga., Oct. 26 (AP). Georgia's Confederate veterans today registered opposition to the proposed erection of a Grant-Lee memorial monument at Appomattox and elected Gen. DeT. Lawrence, of Marietta, as their new commander.

The veterans oppose erection of the monument, their resolution said, because it "commemmorates" and memorializes "wrong over right," memorializes "the subjugation of the South, and of the institution of Negro rule and carpet bagger supremacy in the South." A copy of the resolution was ordered transmitted to President Roosevelt.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy of Georgia and Virginia, the Sons of Confederate Veterans of Georgia and the Southern Confederate Memorial Association already have passed similar resolutions.

Dowd Marker Sought at G. U.

Memorial Planned to First American Taking Part in World War.

Erection of a memorial at Georgetown University to the memory of Dennis Dowd, said to have been the first American to enlist in the World War, was proposed yesterday by F. Darius Benham, of New York, who addressed university students. Dowd was a graduate of Georgetown in 1912.

According to Benham, Dowd, who lived at Seacliffe, N. Y., enlisted in the French Legion August 6, 1914. He served with the Legion until 1916, when he transferred to the Lafayette Escadrille. He was killed in a plane crash near Paris August 14, 1916.

Benham is executive secretary of a committee arranging for the memorial. Other members are Robert L. Johnson, Brig. Gen. J. Leslie Kincaid, Col. William J. Donovan, F. Trubee Davison, Kermit Roosevelt, William Randolph Hearst, jr., Lowell Thomas, Clyde E. Pangborn, Edward Rickenbacker, Harry P. Summerville, the Rev. W. Coleman Nevils and Grover Whalen.

Whitney Calls On President

Head of Stock Exchange Refuses to Discuss Conference.

President Roosevelt, who is considering asking Congress to provide governmental supervision of the New York Stock Exchange, yesterday received its president, Richard Whitney, for a half hour.

Declining to discuss the subject of the conference on leaving, Whitney reminded questioners, "You know when I say I have nothing to say I am not going to say anything." He was accompanied to the White House by John Redmond, his attorney.

His cold again kept Mr. Roosevelt from his office, but he received a number of callers in the oval study room in the White House. He sent word that he would return to his office today, when the Cabinet assembles for its regular session.

Those conferring with the President yesterday included Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Assistant Secretary Rexford Tugwell, Joseph B. Eastman, railroad coordinator, and J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency.

Money and Clock Stolen.

An alarm clock and $8 were stolen early yesterday from the Holy Trinity School, Thirty-sixth and O streets northwest, by prowlers who smashed a basement window. The money taken was contained in three small savings banks.

Woman Seeks Divorce If Husband Is Alive

Willis A Cornish, "if living," was named defendant in a suit for absolute divorce filed in District Supreme Court yesterday by Mrs. Lalla H. Cornish, 2019 I street northwest.

The wife informed the court she had not heard of her husband since he sent a letter to his sister in 1929, when he wrote: "Do not feel bad ever—about me—dear sister. Death comes to me free. I greet him cheerily, merrily—like a true friend."

Fay L. Bentley Is Facing Battle Over Judgeship

Senate Confirmation of Juvenile Official Held Doubtful.

Faced with opposition in the Senate and with a law that probably keeps her from assuming her duties until her appointment is confirmed by the Senate, Miss Fay L. Bentley, appointed by the President as judge of the District of Columbia Juvenile Court, remained silent yesterday while a controversy raged around her.

Equally silent was Judge Kathryn Sellers, who still occupies the Juvenile Court bench. Her friends say she has no idea of relinquishing it.

Miss Bentley, meanwhile, had received her commission from Attorney General Homer J. Cummings and had been told by the Justice Department that she could assume the judgship as soon as she takes the oath of office. Miss Bentley said she would discuss with Superintendent of Schools Ballou the time when she can give up her present position as head of the attendance department.

Court Act Quoted.

Section 2 of the Juvenile Court act provides that a judge of the Juvenile Court shall hold office for a term of six years "or until his successor shall be appointed and confirmed."

In the case of some other District officers, the law provides they shall assume office until their successors are "appointed and qualified."

Because of the wording of the law, which says "and confirmed," friends of Judge Sellers say she can and will occupy the office until her successor is confirmed.

Friends of Judge Sellers say the administration recognized this provision of the law when Miss Pearl McCall was appointed to the same post by President Hoover. The Senate failed to confirm the appointment and the President made no attempt to make a recess appointment.

Some Doubt Confirmation.

Democratic opponents of Miss Bentley said they believed it doubtful the Senate would confirm the appointment.

Senator King, chairman of the District Committee, previously had made the same statement, asserting Miss Bentley is not a Democrat. It was recalled that Miss Bentley had been mentioned as a possible Republican appointee under the Hoover administration. She turned to the Democratic party last year.

As further proof of the intent of the law, friends of Judge Sellers pointed out the law provides that in case the Juvenile Court bench is vacant because of illness or death, the District Supreme Court shall designate a municipal judge to act until a juvenile judge shall be "appointed and confirmed."

Lieut. Col. Max C. Tyler Gets Cleveland Post

Lieut. Col. Max C. Tyler, who from 1919 to 1923 was in charge of the Washington Engineer District and directed the Great Falls survey, was assigned to succeed Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of engineers, in the post he vacated at Cleveland, Ohio, the War Department announced yesterday.

Membership Is Increasing in Several District Walking Clubs.

Trails leading over swift creeks, into mountains. The tang of autumn winds spanking ruddy cheeks. White clouds overhead, like toy balloons. A pleasant, tired feeling as bacon sizzles to a crisp in camp skillets.

These attractions of the Great Outdoors have lured Washingtonians in increasing numbers, until the Capital has become one of the principal hiking centers in the East. The Potomac Appalachian Trail Club, the hiking classes at Southeastern University and the byroads of numerous suburban and city parks have claimed thousands of professional people and office workers who seek sound wind and limbs. This year the number has multiplied remarkably.

The Trail Club, senior Washington hiking organization, whose members leave the city in buses for hikes in mountain districts, now boasts a membership of more than 300.

Cover 25,000 Miles.

Members have covered more than 25,000 miles since their club was organized by eight enthusiasts in 1924. The founders were led by Myron H. Avery, Harold C. Anderson and Dr. J. F. Schiarer.

The hiking class at Southeastern, which is really a branch of the Y. M. C. A., has covered an equal distance.

Most long distance hiking is supervised by the Trail Club. Weekends the hikers, arriving at a chosen spot, leave their buses and throw their kits over their backs. Then, striding into the steady, even cadence which is the mark of the experienced hiker, they disappear, perhaps not to return until next morning.

Members of All Ages.

Members of the club are of all ages. The youngest, for instance, are 18 or 19—and the oldest, who keeps pace on 10 and 20 mile jaunts, is G. T. Aldridge, 82.

Officers of the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club are M. H. Avery, president; L. E. Schmeckebier, first vice president; W. E. Malcolm Wood, second vice president; H. C. Anderson, secretary; Kathryn A. Fulkerson, assistant secretary; Marian E. Lapp, treasurer, and J. F. Schairer, supervisor of trails.

The club has recently opened a trail new to Washingtonians, a 39-mile section of the Appalachian Trail, extending from Harpers Ferry, W. Va., to Pen Mar, on the Pennsylvania-Maryland line.

The trail section was cleared last year. It unites 143 miles in Virginia and 78 miles in Pennsylvania. Occasional shelter houses dot it. The maximum altitude is at Quirauk Mountain, 2,145 feet.

College Hiking Course.

Prize creation of Dr. Roy Lyman Sexton, Washington physician and medical adviser on the faculty of Southeastern University, is his hiking course. Students get credit if they cover 200 miles between April 1 and June 1 of the scholastic year.

Southeastern, under Dr. Sexton, was the first Eastern university to establish such a course.

Added to all the work of Washington's hiking organizations are the thousands of individuals who, unguided, wend their ways through Rock Creek and Potomac Parks.

State Building Changes Aided By Allotment

Plans to Be Drafted for Garage and Tunnel to White House.

Revival of an old movement to remodel the exterior of the State, War and Navy building was seen yesterday with the announcement by the Public Works Administration of an allotment of $19,000 to the Treasury Department for completing plans for the building's improvement.

The announcement said plans include a tunnel to the White House, an underground garage to accommodate 164 automobiles and a large center room in the building.

The plans already have been drawn up partially. Plans for remodeling the exterior were prepared more than four years ago and approved by Secretary of State Kellogg.

Because of continued criticism of the architecture of the building, Mr. Kellogg proposed to change its east and west sides to conform to those of the Treasury Building. When the depression came in 1929 the proposal was dropped.

Public works officials had no comment to make yesterday on whether the allotment of funds to complete the other set of plans might be followed with a proposal to reconstruct the exterior.

Women Consider Control of Liquor

Attendance at Hearings on D. C. Rule Planned.

Plans to participate in efforts to obtain a model liquor control law for the District will be made by the District division of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform next Tuesday. The executive committee will meet at the home of the chairman, Mrs. William Beverley Mason.

A committee will be appointed to appear at congressional committee hearings.

"Our organization is convinced the majority of District residents want a reasonable liquor law, which will permit not only sales of all liquors under a well regulated system, but also will aid in developing temperate habits in the community," Mrs. Mason said yesterday.

"The organization is studying regulatory systems and is preparing to make known its views at congressional hearings."

Motorist, Hurt in Sewer Hole, Seeks $100,000

Suit for $100,000 damages was filed in District Supreme Court yesterday by Ivan W. Bailey, 2621 Seventeenth street northeast, against Peter D'Adamo, trading as the D'Adamo Construction Co., of Baltimore, and the District Government.

Bailey charged, through attorneys L. N. Coe and A. L. Newmyer, that he drove an automobile into a sewer excavation at Connecticut avenue and Rodman street northwest, last February. He attributed to lack of proper guard appliances the fact that his car was wrecked and he was permanently injured.

Navy to Hold 'Open House' On Natal Day

All Departments Ready Here With Programs for Public.

John Paul Jones Will Be Paid Tribute at Monument.

All brances of the Navy in Washington will join the Nation today in celebrating Navy Day with an "at home" for inspection by citizens on the 158th anniversary of the Service. Ships and Stations were visited last year by more than 100,000.

An all-day program including drills and exhibits is scheduled at the Navy Yard. Whale boat races and airplane flights are among featured activities.

For the convenience of visitors to the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, boats will run from Hains Point to the station every 15 minutes. There, 30 modern airplanes will be on exhibition from 8 a. m. until sunset. They will participate in a short flight at 1 p. m. and Marine planes from Quantico will do some formation flying at 4 p. m. An orchestra will play throughout the day.

Observatory Program.

At the Naval Observatory visitors will be entertained from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. without any special admittance credentials. The observatory will be open from 7:30 p. m. to 10 p. m for observing through telescopes for persons with admission cards.

Lieut. Col. Ross E. Rowell, who will command the Marine flying unit, stated the flying exhibit will be a departure from the usual air shows. He will direct the fliers by radiophone in a series of maneuvers, including a mass attack of fighting planes on observation planes and a combined attack on a target in the Anacostia River.

Exercises will be held at the John Paul Jones Monument at the foot of Seventeenth street, at the Tidal Basin, under the auspices of the Military Order of the World War and the National Sojourners, with a number of veteran and patriotic organizations participating.

Admiral Rodman to Speak.

Admiral T. J. Cowie, retired, will preside and Maj. Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., will act as master of ceremonies. A five-minute outline of the life of John Paul Jones will be presented by Lieut. Comdr. Webster M. Thompson, assistant chief of staff. Admiral Hugh Rodman will deliver the principal address.

Organizations participating include the American War Mothers, Sons of the American Revolution, Military Order of Foreign Wars, National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Heroes of '76, Reserve Officers Association, the American Legion and the American Women's Legion.

Greeting From President.

President Roosevelt, in a message to Acting Secretary of Navy Roosevelt, stressed the importance of the Navy as a unit of National defense. He praised the continued good service of all units of the organization.

Secretary Swanson will send the customary annual message of the Secretary of the Navy to the fleet and a like message will be sent by Admiral W. H. Standley, chief of naval operations, to American merchant vessels.

Wage Splitter Fired Off Job

Subcontractor at Walter Reed Hospital Accused of Taking Rebate.

Accused of having coerced plasterers working for him to rebate part of their wages, a subcontractor on construction at Walter Reed Hospital has been ordered off the job, the War Department announced yesterday.

According to officials, four men filed affidavits stating they were compelled to rebate 50 cents of each $1.50 per hour received, the prevailing scale.

Army investigators conducted two hearings at the hospital. Revocation of the contract was then ordered. The work was on an addition to the nurses' quarters.

Numerous workers here are being victimized in the same manner, John Locher, secretary of the Washington Building Trades Council, said last night. Few such instances have been exposed, he said, because the men need work and will sacrifice part of their pay to hold the job. The council has rectified a number of cases involving union labor, Locher declared.

14th Street To Be Widened

20 Feet Will Be Added From Constitution Ave. to Water Street.

Plans for widening Fourteenth street from Constitution avenue to Water street southwest were announced yesterday by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways. Bids are to be asked Monday and opened two weeks later.

The roadway is to be widened from 50 to 70 feet. Ten feet is to be taken off each side. This will necessitate removal of the outer row of shade trees along the west sidewalk a part of the way.

Expenditure of $98,000 has been authorized under allotment from the Public Works Administration. The first work will be construction of a retaining wall in front of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where a new sidewalk will be laid.

Pou to Urge U. S. Restore Pay Slashes

Fight to Regain Federal Salary Scales Given New Support.

Employes' Leader Says Pay Rolls Actually Cut 40 Per Cent.

New Congressional support in the drive to restore the 15 per cent Federal pay cut was reported yesterday as E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, charged Federal pay rolls actually have been reduced 40 per cent.

Of 15 messages favoring repeal of the salary reduction legislation, added to 25 previously received, Babcock attached especial significance to a telegram from Chairman Pou (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Rules Committee:

"I favor restoration of the 15 per cent pay cut at the earliest possible moment."

Sees Low Levels Unwise.

Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, pledged support and characterized the lower wage levels as unwise. Others sending communications promising aid included Representatives Boylan (Democrat), New York; Kvale (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota; Kirksen (Republican), Illinois; Kelly (Republican), Pennsylvania; Dingell (Democrat), Michigan; Healey (Democrat), Massachusetts; Bloom (Democrat), New York; Cullen (Democrat), New York; Kenney (Democrat), New Jersey; Crowther (Republican), New York; Mead (Democrat), New York; Young (Democrat), Ohio, and Eagle (Democrat), Texas.

Babcock made public a letter to Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, only member of opposition to pay cut restoration.

He told Blanton the extent of the Government pay roll reduction is not generally known. He estimated the flat 15 per cent cut, with the addition of dismissals and furloughs, represented a 40 per cent reduction in the annual sum spent on salaries.

Thousands Affected.

Thousands of workers, Babcock contended, have been forced under the economy act to perform new and more important duties without raises in pay. He said when an employe is retired for age, is dismissed or resigns, his work is absorbed by others "and no one gets a penny more pay."

G. W. Coaches Fear Wesleyan Tonight Despite Heavy Favoritism

Lefty Grove to Join Red Sox in Deal Reported to Involve $200,000

Bobcat Team Noted for Upsets

Overconfidence Is Chief Fear of Colonials in Night Battle.

G.W.Backfield Crippled; Bomba Definitely Out of Game.

ALTHOUGH George Washington rules a 3-1 favorite over West Virginia Wesleyan in their game tonight at Griffith Stadium, the Colonial coaches frankly do not expect the team to walk away from he Bobcats. A close, bitterly contested game is what they anticipate and what they have prepared their charges for.

West Virginia Wesleyan has an annoying habit of upsetting better-known opponents, and G. W. has an irritating habit of playing its worst against smaller teams. The Catawba and Westminster games of last season are good examples.

After absorbing a 25-0 defeat by Duquesne, Wesleyan amazed football followers with a well-earned 3-0 victory over New York University, and the G. W. coaches, with their team weakened by injuries, are apprehensive lest the Bobcats regain the form they displayed against N. Y. U.

The reactions of both teams from last Saturday's games also must be considered. Regarded as the under dog in its game with Auburn, G. W. attained the heights of brilliance in turning back the Plainsmen in decisive fashion. The same day Wesleyan was supposed to have swamped little Salem College. But something happened that was not expected. Salem clicked on all 11 cylinders and Wesleyan stalled, and lost the ball game.

Wesleyan to Fight.

G. W. may be a trifle too confident tonight, a dangerous mood when Wesleyan is certain to be fighting every inch of the way in its effort to erase bitter memories of last Saturday. The visitors also will have more strength for tonight's fray than last week, when five regulars sat on the side lines nursing bruises. Len Barnum, the sensational freshman, is ineligible under the C. W. code.

The downtown school seeks its fourth victory of the season and will be striving to protect its undefeated record, which is marred only by that scoreless tie with Clemson. Wesleyan's record is unimpressive, having lost to Duquesne, Geneva and Davis Elkins, in addition to last week's game. It is significant that the Bobcats have managed to score against all of its opponents with exception of Duquesne.

The visitors boast a pair of capable wingmen in Edison Rine and Harry Spears, both of whom played here last season. Howard Bachtel, the quarter back, is serving his third term in office, while Clark Hull, full back, Irving Howell and Joe Hall, the latter a local boy, half backs, are all experienced men.

Doose in Lineup.

Another injury to Don Bomba, this time in his shoulder, in addition to a rebroken nose, will keep him out of action. Since Davenport and Walsh also are ailing, it will be up to Chris Doose to fill the assignment. After Doose will come Finis Parrish. It is improbable, too, that 'Nig" McCarver and his broken nose will get into the game. Otherwise, the same team that took the field against Auburn will start the game.

George Washington will outweigh its opponent by 10 pounds to the man in the back field and also will have a smaller advantage at the ends. From tackle to tackle, however, the clubs will be evenly matched and it is in this portion of the line that much of the battle will be fought.

Wesleyan is expected to take advantage of the heft concentrated in

Mack's Star Bought by Boston

Bishop Also May Go in Deal to Aid in Rebuilding Sox.

Pinch of Hard Times and No Sunday Baseball Felt by Athletics.

nouncement that he was spending $350,000 to improve Fenway Park in expectation of the larger crowds the Red Sox are likely to draw with a contending team in the American League race.

The past three seasons have seen the Philadelphia Club put much red ink in its ledgers even in its latest pennant-winning year of 1931, when Mack declared that the team lost money despite its championship and a share in the world series.

Sunday Baseball Factor.

The absence of Sunday baseball in Philadelphia was another factor that entered into the Grove deal, with the Athletics deprived of the Sabbath home games, the most profitable of any club's schedule.

Philadelphia is to vote on the Sunday baseball ordinance the first week in November, when a referendum will be held. The Sunday baseball bill was twice beaten in the Pennsylvania Legislature. Indications that the bill may be beaten in the referendum is believed partially responsible for the Athletics' decision to sell Grove.

The man who handled the negotiations for Yawkey was Eddie Collins, former coach of the Athletics when Grove first blossomed as the most sensational pitcher in baseball. Collins, who last week engineered the deal that brought Infielder Cissell to the Red Sox from Cleveland, is charged with the rebuilding of the Boston club into a flag contender.

Good Baseball Town.

Boston has long been recognized as one of the outstanding baseball towns in the circuit in the event that Hub fans had reason to support a contender. With entire New England to draw from, Boston is situated handily for a tremendous fan-public. Crowds of 50,000 drawn by the Boston Braves when they were a National League contender late last season attest to baseball's popularity here.

Grove long has been recognized as the most effective of all big league pitchers during the past decade. For six consecutive years he has led the American League hurlers. His southpaw fast ball has gained him an earned-run record that has no rival in modern baseball. He set an all-time record for left-handed pitchers in 1931 when he won 31 games and lost 4.

Purchased for $106,500 by Mack from the Baltimore Orioles in 1925, Grove was an immediate success in big leagues. The protege of Jack Dunn won 10 games his first season, 13 in his second and since that year has never won fewer than 20 games. Since 1928 he has led all pitchers in the league.

Shikat Winner Over Olsen In 50 Mins.

Young but Willing Swede Victim of Series of Body Slams.

THEY sent a boy to do a man's work in the rassle ring at the Auditorium last night, when they pitted young, but willing, Cliff (Swede) Olsen against Dick Shikat, former title holder. The lad did right well for himself for nearly 50 minutes, but class told in the end and the wily veteran was the winner.

The fracas was interesting, at times having the smaller-than-usual crowd of 3,000 standing up and yelling like mad. Olson began to fade at the half-hour mark and Shikat began to step out. The latter sank the Swede with some thorhammers and straight-arm punches and then put him out of his misery with a series of body slams just as Timekeeper Sam Hugo was singsonging "fif-i-ty minutes."

Sarpolis Beats Spaniard.

Probably the best bout on the card was the semifinal, which saw Dr. Karl Sarpolis down Andres Castanos, a hefty Spaniard, just half a minute before the three-quarter-hour time limit. It was a rough and tough affair, with the good doctor, usually clean-cut in his work, reminding one of Tigah Nelson at his worst. The referees have added his name to the schooling list. Sorpolis won unexpectedly with his famous flying scissors.

Tom Alley, of Australia, reminded of Winooka, another Anzac "bust," in his bout with popular Paul Boesch. He heard the birdies twitter at the end of 25 minutes, after being on the receiving end of several punishing flying tackles.

Opener Is Draw.

Casey Berger and Karl Davis battled to a draw in the opening affair, which was a free-for-all with nothing barred—that is, with nothing interfered with by Referee Fred Huber.

Henry Piers, of Holland, and Orville Brown drew in the other fracas listed. Brown was green at the game. He was strong, though, and it was on this account that he was able to go the route with his more experienced but not particularly clever foe.

Trading of Goslin Denied by Griffith

The sale of Goose Goslin to the Boston Red Sox was vigorously denied by Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats last night as he ridiculed the report.

"It may be true, but nobody has consulted me on the subject," said Griffith. "After all, I have a right to know in what city my ball players are going to play ball.

"I have received no offers for Goslin or any other player on the Washington Club. We contemplate no changes."

Washington-Lee Bows to Eastern

McCarthy, Cavell, Keegan Shine; Score, 32-0.

Jack McCarthy, former star full back at St. John's, celebrated his transfer to Eastern yesterday afternoon by scoring two touchdowns and kicking two extra points, to aid Eastern in its 32-0 victory over Washington-Lee High School, of Ballston, Va. The game was played in the Eastern Stadium.

Cavell, highly press-agented Filipino back and transferee from Tech, also celebrated the occasion by adding a touchdown in the first period of play, while Joe Keegin, quarter back, extraordinary, accounted for the other two talleys.

The appearance of these new men in the line-up is a result of the six weeks ruling concerning transfers, and from their play yesterday, it is a safe bet that the Lincoln Parkers' stock has risen ten fold for the remainder of the season.

Unimpressive Drill Staged By Tigers

Passing Falters as Hour Nears for W. L. Game; Other Grid News.

(Associated Press.)

PRINCETON, N. J.—Princeton's varsity, preparing for Washington and Lee, was drilled in fundamentals during an unimpressive workout today. A drill in passing was marked by poor execution, both by the throwers and the receivers. The only change in the line-up set Bob Kopf in at left guard for John Weller.

Columbia Drill Sloppy.

New York—Lou Little was a bit disturbed by Columbia's sloppy work in a drill for the Penn State game. The second-string team, with Tom Tomb doing the throwing, gained plenty of ground with Penn State passing plays, while the varsity's aerial work was a complete failure.

Lafayette Loses Bialek.

Easton, Pa.—Lafayette's hopes of stopping Colgate, never too bright, took another drop when it became known that Buck Bialek, bucking full back star, would be unable to play.

Meehan Seeks Kicker.

New York—Hoping to offset Villanova's superior running attack with a kicking game, Chick Meehan, of Manhattan College, drilled five backs, including Larry Spellman and Red Welch, of the varsity, on punting for several hours. All five were averaging better than 40 yards.

Cornell Hard at Work.

Ithaca, N. Y.—With the return of good weather, Gil Dobie called his Cornell squad back to intensive work for the Columbia game 10 days hence. A defensive scrimmage against Columbia plays was the feature.

Army Leaves for Yale.

West Point, N. Y.—Army wound up its preparations for the Yale game with a dummy scrimmage and departed for New Haven. The B squad gave the varsity a final opportunity to study the Yale attack and defensive tactics. Although the weight chart today showed the average poundage to be below what it was for the Illinois game, Coach Davidson said he would start the same team against the Elis.

Backs Harvard Problem.

Cambridge, Mass.—Back-field problems again bothered Harvard's coaches as the Crimson held a dummy scrimmage in preparation for Dartmouth. Johnny Adzigian, a sophomore, was promoted to a varsity berth at left half, putting two second-year men on the starting back field. Charlie Nevin, reserve half back, was added to the injury list as the result of yesterday's drill

Penn Regulars Ailing.

Philadelphia—Three Penn regulars—Bob McCaffrey and Cy Newcomb, guards, and Johnny Powell, end—were definitely listed as being out of the Navy game with injuries. Ed Lewis, whose nose was broken in the Dartmouth clash, reported for practice, wearing a special head gear to protect his nose.

Penn State Is Ready.

State College, Pa.—With Tony Dedoski, guard, the only injured "regular," the Penn State squad of 26 left for New York to play Columbia Saturday.

Holy Cross Has Task.

Worcester, Mass.—The Holy Cross freshmen, using Brown plays, gained consistently against the varsity, as Joe Sheeketski, back-field coach, did some effective passing. The principal task appeared to be eliminating a feeling of overconfidence arising from the victory over Harvard.

Winooka Faces Second Test At Laurel

Seeks Vindication Today Against Field of Six; Britt Has Mount.

WE shall have more Winooka today.

The big Australian horse, which ran last in a five-horse race to the amazement of Laurel fans last Wednesday, will compete today in the 6-furlong Westover Handicap. The decision of the horse's handlers comes as a distinct surprise. It is taken to mean that Winooka will be raced into condition henceforth.

From a reliable source it was learned that Trainer Michael Polson had considerable difficulty in persuading Rufe Naylor, manager of the horse, to allow Winooka to compete today. It is said that the Australian trainer has contended since coming East that the horse needed competition.

Opposed to the son of Windbag—Kanooka today will be Curacao, Hope to Do, Springsteel, De Valera, Band Wagon and Dark Hope. This field is only a shade below that which outclassed the Australian champion the other day. Winooka has been assigned 126 pounds and must give weight to each member of the group. Springsteel carries 120, but the weights scale down to 105 for Hope to Do and Dark Hope.

According to the Winooka establishment, Edgar Britt is the only jockey who will ride the horse. Efforts to have Sonny Workman in the saddle of the invader today were waved aside.

Trainer Polson, who was heartbroken at the showing of Winooka, hopes that his charge will make amends today. He expects Winooka to turn in a wininng performance, but will not be disappointed should the big horse again fail.

He is inclined to blame Winooka's defeat on the style of race run by the American horses. In Australia, he says, horses do not start races at top speed, and the fact that Winooka was away with a lightning pace might have caused the horse to tire.

Polson, who strangely had been outside of all the ballyhoo that has attended the horse, disclosed yesterday that love for the horse and Messrs. McDonald and Matthews, the owners, rather than any money angle prompted him to bring Winooka to the United States.

South Carolina Wins From Citadel, 12 to 6

Orangeburg, S. C., Oct. 26 (AP). South Carolina found the Citadel a fiercely fighting and threatening foe, but managed to gain a 12-to-6 victory over the Bulldogs today in the twenty-eighth annual battle of the teams.

The 5,000 fans who witnessed the fray at the Orangeburg County Fair got plenty of thrills as the stubborn and aggressive Bulldog crew pitted its skill and might against the heavier Gamecocks.

It was Earl Clary, the old standby if the Bird outfit, who took over both of his eleven's counters. He scored the first early in the game in a dazzling 34-yard run and bucked the other from the 1-yard line in the fourth period.

Short Citadel punts gave the Gamecocks good starts on both of their scoring drives.

C. U. Is Favorite Over Wake Forest

Cardinals Limber Up for Game at Raleigh.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 26.—With three regulars definitely out of the line-up because of injuries, Wake Forest was relegated to the role of underdog on the eve of its important game with Catholic University. Earlier in the week the Deacons ruled a slight favorite over the visitors.

Duncon Wilson, half back, Davey Holton, quarter back, and Marion Chetty, tackle, are the casualties responsible for the change in odds. Herb Smith will sub for Chetty, while Grimith will start at the signal calling post and Myers at half back.

Coach Arthur J. Bergman, of Catholic U., announced his starting line-up would be McGann and Fleming, ends; Stafford and Gross, tackles; Lyons and Conter, guards; White, center; Augusterfer, quarter back; Finn and Jankowski, half backs; and Oliver, full back.

Catholic went through a brisk limbering up workout here this afternoon in secret, while Wake Forest tapered off with a lengthy but not strenuous drill. Both clubs anticipate a gruelling battle.

Notre Dame Prepares New Attack for Pitt

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 26 (AP). Something new in the way of a Notre Dame offense can be expected Saturday when the Irish meet Pittsburgh.

A secret practice was held today and Coach Anderson's only comment was "just brushing up on our offense," but it was rumored that the session was devoted to a new attack which will be sprung against the Panthers.

The Irish experienced difficulty in stopping Pittsburgh plays in dummy scrimmage.

Meglin and Trump to Play for Crippled Hoyas Against W. & M.

TWO men who have spent most of the season surveying games from a rather obscure place on the players' bench will be given the opportunity of proving their mettle tomorrow when Georgetown clashes with William and Mary at Griffith Stadium. Both of them, Joe Meglin and Earl Trump are backs.

Meglin has been in and out of games at infrequent intervals, so infrequent, in fact that he plainly shows a lack of experience. On the other hand Trump has never been under fire.

To Meglin will be entrusted the kicking. Forward passing, however, will be the keynote of attack if Hagerty follows his present plans. Hillery Costello, a crack passer, will heave the pigskin. Hagerty decided on the kicking and passing game after injuries reduced the squad to skeleton strength.

Hagerty's Plight Sad.

Hagerty's plight is a sad one when it comes to material. Georgetown was nothing to rave about when at full physical strength, now when it is virtually without physically sound players, the situation is deplorable. William and Mary is the last opponent the Hoyas have even a fighting chance of stopping. It's only a far-fetched chance at best, and Georgetown will be the underdog. After Saturday come Boston College, Carnegie Tech and West Virginia. The Naval Observatory telescope would be required to

Yale-Princeton Nonscouting Pact Seen as 'Big Three' Joke

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (AP).—Now that the big three of the East, Harvard, Yale and Princeton, are all one large happy family again in a football way for next season at least, the experts are wondering what's to happen eventually to Yale's famous nonscouting policy.

A half dozen years ago Tad Jones, then the Eli head coach, and Bill Roper, director of Princeton's play, joined in the first agreement among major colleges not to scout each other's plays and formations in games preliminary to their meeting. For a year Yale extended the policy to all opponents, then applied it only to the Brown and Princeton games. Harvard never did join in the agreement.

Officially Yale and Princeton, the latter resuming relations with Harvard after a lapse since 1926, still

Asher Is Winner In Rotary Tourney

Goode, May Win Prizes; Houghton Shoots 69.

Clyde B. Asher, of Columbia Country Club, played the long and difficult Beaver Dam course in 86 shots yesterday to capture low gross honors in the annual Rotary Club golf tournament.

Two other Columbia men also carried off prizes, L. J. Goode, with 88-16-73, and Arthur May, with 94-17-77, winning first and second low net respectively.

Al Houghton continues to shoot below the seventies. It's a habit with him. Houghton scored a 69 yesterday at Kenwood, playing with George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring pro, and Sam Rice, Washington baseball star. Diffenbaugh had 72, and Rice, 79.

WITH GREATER VALUES TO YOU!

Mrs. Haynes Eliminated in Handicap Tourney for Post's Golf Trophy on 18th Hole

3-Putt Green Brings End To Match

Columbia Star Unable to Give Mrs. Letts 14 Strokes and Win.

Miss Houghton, of Chevy Chase Among 8 Survivors in Tourney.

MRS. J. MARVIN HAYNES, District titleholder, who gave away 14 strokes to Mrs. T. Dickinson Letts, of Congressional, yesterday at Columbia Country Club in the second round of the match play with handicap tournament for The Washington Post Trophy, courageously carried her opponent to the eighteenth green, and lost the day's feature match by the margin of a missed 2-foot putt.

Spotting Mrs. Letts a shot on every hole except the four short ones, Mrs. Haynes needed a 5 on the 392-yard home hole to tie the match, but three-putted to lose the hole and match.

Mrs. Letts' victory swept out of the tournament the lowest handicap player in the District. Mrs. Haynes has a 2 handicap. Her valiant stand in the face of such odds proved the big talk among the women golfers last night.

Mrs. Beller Advances.

Two other Columbia women, however, remained in the running as a result of victories. They were Mrs. J. W. Beller, 8 handicap player, and Mrs. William Morrison Smith, 18 handicap player. Mrs. Beller eliminated her good friend, Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase, 7 handicap, by 4 and 3, after drawing away on the stretch, and Mrs. Smith, whose 43 was the surprise package of the qualifying round, continued her grand playing, to put out Mrs. J. Frank Gross, of Indian Spring, who gave away 6 strokes, by 3 and 2.

Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, who is favored by many to go to the finals, pitted her 11 handicap against Mrs. J. G. Kramer's 15, and eliminated the Manor entry by 3 and 1. Manor gained some consolation in the knowledge that one of its golfers, Mrs. B. D. Gamble, survived the day's firing. Mrs. Gamble, 16 handicap player, spurred on by Wednesday's victory over Mrs. L. O. Cameron, spotted Mrs. H. M. Brundage 2 strokes, and nosed ahead by a 2-up margin.

Mrs. Irwin Winner.

Mrs. M. E. Irwin remained as Beaver Dam's lone contestant by defeating Mrs. Florence G. Godfrey, public links star, 5 and 4. Both had 14 handicaps. Mrs. Irwin shot a fine 46 on the first nine to take a 3 up lead which she never relinquished.

Chevy Chase sent two more of its players into the quarter-finals when Mrs. Landra B. Platt walloped Mrs. J. E. Davis, of Army and Navy, 4 and 3, and Mrs. McCook-Knox defeated Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, 2 and 1. Both Mrs. Platt and Mrs. Davis have 13 handicaps, while Mrs. Knox, with 13, had to concede Mrs. Keefer two strokes.

Results with handicaps:

Tech Favored In Western Contest

Air Game Holds Hope of Georgetown Eleven in Battle Today.

High School Statistics.

	W.	L.	T.	Pts.	Op. P.

Games Played to Date.

Eastern, 0; Central, 0.
Tech, 45; Roosevelt, 0.
Eastern, 18; Western, 0.
Central, 95; Roosevelt, 0.

THE only difference between Hap Hardell, the Gloomy Gil and impresario of football tactics at McKinley Tech High School, and Gil Dobie, the Gloomy Hap of Cornell University, is that Hardell generally wins all his ball games each season.

Today, Maestro Hardell will lead his club against Western on the Central Stadium field with the kick-off scheduled, as usual at 3:30 p. m.

The only chance the Westenders have of copping this interhigh tilt is the unlikely fact that his entire team hopped freights last night to join young Fishbein, the Central center, in balmy, sun-kissed Florida. No reports to the Missing Persons' Bureau were received last night, so Hap will probably win the game by a goodly number of points.

McKinley is roosting in first place in the interhigh by its lone win over Roosevelt last week, in which the Manual Training eleven thumped Roosevelt, 45-0. Western, on the other hand, was slugged by a three-touchdown margin at the hands of Eastern.

That Tech has another championship team, can not be denied, despite the fact that Central ran up 95 points on Roosevelt last Tuesday. The Technicians could have done the same thing had Hardell so deemed it by leaving in his first stringers throughout the game.

But against the Georgetown team today Tech will not have a setup. The Westerners are powerfully big along the line, and, in Gamage and Krouse, have two hefty lads that broke up Eastern's running plays last week continually. The lone weakness shown by the Hardell eleven is its defense against forward passes, which probably will be Western's big scoring threat with Jimmy Corcoran tossing the leather egg to his halves and ends.

Bogley, Tech half, uncovered in last week's tilt with Roosevelt, looks like a real find, and, although Hardell will start the same eleven that opened up against the Ruf Riders last week, his latest budding star will be on deck early in the melee.

The line-up:

Maryland Relying On Revamped Team

Despite the nearness of the important Western Maryland game, Maryland's coaches yesterday were still seeking 11 men who could be welded into a smooth-functioning combination to face the Terrors at Baltimore. Five changes in the personnel of the first team the day before failed to satisfy, and all indications pointed to more shifts before tomorrow.

That the departure of Nelson and Yaeger from the back field and Webb, Simpson and Bradley from the line is permanent was apparent yesterday when they watched a dummy scrimmage from the sidelines. Their indifferent attitude was held responsible for the coaches' decision to bench them.

On the first team yesterday were Ennis and Bernie Buscher, ends; Minion and Callahan, tackles; Silber and Garrott, guards; Gretz, center; Crecca, quarter back; Bucky Buscher and Widmyer, half backs, and Sachs, full back. They ran through signals and engaged in a dummy scrimmage with "B" team.

All of Maryland's efforts this week have been directed toward a defense capable of bottling up Bill Shepherd, W. M.'s wiry half-back, who almost defeated Georgetown single-handed last week.

Nonscouting Pact Now Seen as Joke

maintain their faith in the policy. Harvard, and Head Coach Eddie Casey, scouting all opponents, still feel as they did when the matter came up originally.

But in discussions that aren't for the records, coaches both at Yale and Princeton have expressed opposition to the official attitudes of the controlling powers in the athletic administration of the two universities.

Said one coach at Yale recently:

"It's a sort of a 'sacred cow' with us now, but it makes for many difficult situations. We scout all other teams except Brown and Princeton. Technically we come down to the two games with no knowledge of our opponents. Actually that's impossible.

"To maintain the strict letter of the nonscouting rule, we couldn't read the newspapers with accounts of Princeton play. If the enthusiastic alumnus starts to tell of what he saw last week at Princeton, we must stop him and explain that he can not give us such information. It leads to a smirking kind of a situation that personally I do not believe is necessary.

"Last season, for instance, coaches attending the Princeton-Yale freshman game at Princeton could not stay to see the Princeton varsity play that afternoon, although we were invited to do so, unofficially. It was kind of a silly situation, wasn't it?"

The Caterpillar Club is composed exclusively of airmen who have saved their lives by jumping from their craft by parachute. That is the only qualification necessary to become a member of the myhtical club. There are no officers, no dues, no constitution, by-laws, meetings or elections of this club. Its members are almost entirely airplane pilots who have "bailed out" from a disabled ship, but there are also some blimp and balloon passengers who have qualified for the club. Men who make exhibition jumps do not qualify. It must be a life-saving jump.

The first man to jump from a disabled aircraft and descend safely to ground with a parachute was Jordaki Kuparento, a Polish balloonist, who, in 1808, escaped from his burning balloon in this fashion. Although the Caterpillar Club was an unknown thing by that name for 100 years after Kuparento made his jump, to him is due the honor of being the first member.

In modern aviation the first men who saved their lives by jumping are the two who, strange as it seems, escaped from a burning blimp, the Wingfoot Express, over Chicago in 1919. They were Henry Wacker and John Boettner.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

SMASHING season records seems to be a weekly pastime in the District League, as was evidenced last night at the Lucky Strike alleys in the match between the crack Occidental crew and the Lucky Strike team. Rolling against the team which last week broke the season's high-team set by piling up a total of 1,931 pins, the Lucky Strike team came back last night to shove that record into oblivion by smashing a total pinfall of 1,937, with games of 669, 644 and 624.

In spite of this exceptional maple busting, the Lucky Strike team could do no better than win one game from the Occidental team, which was tied for first place last week. Dutch Weidman and Ed Blakeney, Lucky Strike stars, captured high individual set honors with 418 and 402, respectively, while Dutch Newman (Occidental) led with 410, closely followed by Clarke's 395. The result of the match puts Occidental in a tie with King Pin for league leadership, Occidental being rated the No. 1 position by virtue of total painfall.

Temple, with George Honey rolling a 390 set, took the odd game from Georgetown on the Temple alleys; Columbia, with Karl Gochenour's 368 set paving the way, took two from Convention Hall on the latter's alleys; Arcadia, with Freddie Moore's 152 game and 378 set, won two from Hyattsville, at Hyattsville, Perce Wolfe leading the losers with a 391 set, and on the Petworth alleys, King Pin took two from Beacon Sign. Maxie Rosenberg (Beacon Sign) saved his team from losing three games by counting 40 pins in the last two frames and winning the game by one pin.

Catherine Federline, Treasury ctar, aided by a 137 game, broke the season's high individual set record in the Ladies Federal League at the Arcadia alleys, rolling 372, and helping her team capture high team game with 567 and toppling 1,569 pins, breaking the high team set mark.

Schuyler (Statistics) and Bell (Construction) were the individual stars in the War Department League games rolled last night on the Columbia alleys. Schuyler's 143 was high for game and Bell's 376 took top honors for individual set. The Frankies had a monopoly on team honors with 603 and 1,649.

The girls behind the Greek letters rolled in the Inter-Sorority League at the Columbia alleys. Delta Alpha turned in high game with 461. Tau Phi reported high team set of 1,349. Miss Howard (Tau Phi) was the individual star, turning in 188 and 323.

For the second time since the two weeks the newly organized Takoma-Silver Spring League has been in existence, Howard Parsons (Fritz Billiards) carried away individual honors, rolling both high game and set with 141 and 371, respectively, at the Takoma alleys last night, but in spite of this effort Fritz Billiards could win but one game from Southern Railway. In the other matches Montgomery County Club swept the match with Sligo; Takoma Sea Food took two from Lohr Real Estate, and Takoma Tigers won the odd game from Kindle Lacey.

Pegler Says

With Regret He Learns of Mr. Goetz Abandoning Zoo for Politics.

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (Spl.).—It is with regret that I read of the decision of Mr. George Getz, the famous Chicago amateur baboon fancier, to abandon baboonery and devote himself to another hobby, politics.

Mr. Getz has been a man of hobbies ever since he became a millionaire in the coal business. It is not for me to say that as he hops from one hobby to another, like a rider in the old pony express, he is riding down from clean and lofty altitudes into some steamy and malarial bogs, but I do not think his second hobby or his third one is an improvement on his first. His second hobby was the prize fight industry. But first it was baboonery.

Mr. Getz went to Chicago from some Pennsylvania Dutch settlement strictly on his own as a boy of 10 or thereabout, which would have been about the same time that Edward Riley Bradley, the J. P. Morgan of the gambling business in America, was lighting out on his own from the same general region at a like age. Possibly, without actually recognizing the longing, Mr. Getz always wanted a baboon of his own.

Sets up Private Zoo.

As soon as he could afford to do so, he established a private zoo at Holland, Mich., and made a trip to Africa to bring them back alive. He soon became one of the foremost American amateur baboonists and there was distinction in his position because comparatively few of his fellowmen knew anything about these creatures beyond just what they had gathered from their idle reading of the Sunday supplements.

Thus Mr. Getz could speak freely on the subject and I am certain that he enjoyed himself because I have seen his eyes glow with pleasure as he expatriated on his pets during train rides, following the world series or some other sport event, from city to city.

Mr. Getz collected other pets, also, on his African trip and installed them in his private zoo, and I remember that when he first broke into the prize fight industry as Tex Rickard's copromoter, in the memorable Tunney-Dempsey uplift movement in Chicago we newspaper boys took to calling him Noah Getz.

Mr. Rickard had met many unusual characters in his time, but it took him quite a while to convince himself that Mr. Getz was real. Here was an independent millionaire who wished to devote himself to the uplift of his community, and who actually believed that a prize fight would contribute something to the culture of the city of Chicago. But when he heard Mr. Getz describe his private zoo, "and all the aoudads and umlauts," as Mr. Rickard put it, he had a dreadful moment of misgivings.

With Money to Spend.

"But," Mr. Rickard said afterward, "what would any man think, after digging up a live one like Mr. Getz, with money to spend on a fight, to hear him talking about a lot of pet baboons and rhinoceroses."

Mr. Getz's interest progressed, upward or downward, as you prefer, from baboonery to pugilism.

Perhaps politics is the next natural step in the sequence, although it does seem a pretty long one to me. I venture that in politics many a time he will long for the society of his baboons and a breath of the fine, clean fragrance of his monkey house.

Bonanza, at 3-1 Odds, Scores Over Vicar in Two-Year-Old Sprint at Laurel

Ziegler Colt Overtakes Leader

Dreel Quits After Setting Pace and Winner Staves Off Vicar's Rush.

Patch Pocket, at $37.00 Mutuel, Scores Easily in Third Race.

THE favorite player—that specie of racegoer who wants only interest for his money and a place to sleep—took what the boys call a shellacking yesterday at Laurel. The deluge of upsets extended right through the Sinapuxent, the day's peculiarly named feature race.

Dreel and Blue for Boys fought a prerace battle for the doubtful honor of favorite. That was the end of their battling for the day. Blue for Boys was finally disclosed as the choice and his supporters had the blues a few minutes later. Dreel, the almost favorite, wasn't quite as red hot a choice as Blue for Boys, but he was warm enough to send chills up the backs of his backers as he ran fourth in the field of six. Dreel changed hands yesterday morning and he transferred many a buck in the afternoon.

Bonanza Wins at $8.60.

There was a winner, of course. It was Bonanza. He was no extremely longshot—this son of Swift and Sure. He earned an $8.60 mutuel by lagging behind Dreel and Blue for Boys and then coming to the outside at the far turn to burn up the track the rest of the way. Vicar, another from the rear end of the field, was second and the tiring Blue for Boys, third.

A post-Winooka crowd of only 6,000 watched the program with a scattering of overcoats showing in a background of topcoats.

After a series of struggles, Union, the horse that finished third in the Belmont Stakes, bounced out of the maiden ranks in the first race. The son of American Flag drew more play than Winooka and paid a $2.60 mutuel. The running of the race was a mere formality. There was much shuffling behind him, however. Shenvalee nosed out Park for the second money and everyone and his brother went down under the stands to cash in those long lines.

Bataille Wins By Whisker.

Earl Porter rode Bataille, the property of J. E. Watts, of Washington, to victory in the second race by a whisker from Peedeeque, or, at least, the judges made that ruling. Moira's Chief was third. Bataille hung close to the pace set by Volplane and then by Her Gold and then Portner put up a brilliant ride to stay up long enough to take the purse. The winner paid a $6.40 mutuel.

Patchpocket, at 17 to 1, won the third race from a bulky field of juveniles, circling the leaders on the far turn and then pulling away in the stretch. Plight, the front runner most of the way, was second and Little Corporal third.

Favorite players continued to take a beating in the fourth race when Star Porter, the important half of the Ral Parr entry, was never headed in a sprint that drew a fair field. Dyak took the place by a neck from Longford. The winner paid $19.40.

Surety and Chrysostom finished heads apart in the sixth race with Tela third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNION, $2.60; $2.40, $2.30; SHENVALEE, $3.00, $2.60; PARK, $3.00.

UNION, assuming command when reaching the back stretch after saving around at the turn, drew into an easy lead when straightened into the home stretch and finished with speed in reserve. SHENVALEE, placed to punishment after five furlongs, settled in her best stride and finished stoutly on the outside. PARK moved up steadily approaching the front stretch, but hung during the last furlong. HOSAIN went kindly for six furlongs, but was not good enough in the final drive. POSTPONEMENT had no excuses. JOLIE FILLE tired badly. POST BRIGADE was steered wide all the way.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATAILLE, $6.40, $3.60, $3.00; PEEDEEQUE (field), $10.80, $4.80; MOIRAS CHIEF, $3.00.

BATAILLE, going in her best form and a strong factor from the beginning, continued strongly when reaching the home stretch and, under severe urging after disposing of HER GOLD, just lasted to outlast PEEDEEQUE. The latter, forced to work his way up on the outside in the late stages, finished full of run. MOIRAS CHIEF, kept within striking distance of the leader, closed in tenacious fashion in the final quarter mile. HER GOLD, prominent early, secured a brief lead entering the home stretch and then fought it out gamely. CABOCHON, slower than usual in the early stages, finished with a rush. VOLPLANE and PRINCESS WRACK quit.

THIRD RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:43½. Off at 2:48½. Winner, E. F. Seagram's blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PATCHPOCKET, $37.00, $15.40, $7.80; PLIGHT, $6.20, $4.20; LITTLE CORPORAL, $7.20.

PATCHPOCKET, avoiding interference at the first turn, drove to the leaders with a rush when reaching the back stretch, opened up a winning lead and had enough in reserve to stall off PLIGHT. The latter had a lot taken out of him racing HIDDEN LORE into defeat, but continued gamely under punishment. LITTLE CORPORAL, crowded back going to the first turn, secured racing room and closed fourth. HIDDEN LORE held on well after racing in the thick of contention. TRIANGULAR closed with a rush, after breaking slowly. NEVERFAIL was unable to threaten the leaders. SMOKE tired. DEAD RECKONING, SLIPPER KING and LITTLE CORPORAL were badly crowded at the first turn.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:15. Off at 3:17. Winner, R. Parr's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR PORTER, $19.40, $5.80, $3.40; DYAK, $3.60, $3.00; LONGFORD, $2.40.

STAR PORTER, quick to begin and displaying good speed, raced HASTIPAST into defeat, opened up a winning lead when straightened into the home stretch and held DYAK safe. The latter, kept close to the leaders, was unable to threaten the winner when under a drive in the late stages. LONGFORD, allowed to drop out of contention, circled his field to close stoutly. HASTIPAST began tiring in the last five-sixteenths after forcing a fast early pace. LADINO was away to a poor start and closed a big rap. CORRYMEELA was not persevered with when she tired after showing early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $800; allowances. For 2-year-olds. The Sinapuxent. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:45. Off at 3:47 (2). Two-dollar mutuels paid—BONANZA, $8.60, $5.00, $3.40; VICAR, $4.40, $3.20; BLUE FOR BOYS, $3.60.

BONANZA, on the outside of the leaders and racing in his best fashion took command when DREEL was eased back leaving the back stretch, was placed to punishment when, after being headed into the home stretch and under severe pressure outstayed VICAR. The latter, badly outpaced for the first half mile, swung to the outside and finished with a belated rush. BLUE FOR BOYS, stoutly ridden from the start, saved a lot of ground when BONANZA and DREEL bore out entering the front stretch. DREEL, setting a stubbornly fast pace, was headed back when nearing the turn, moved up on the outside, but was forced out and he weakened nearing the finish. TULLIHOO and Kepi could not better their positions.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:15. Off at 4:19. Winner, S. D. Stanton's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURETY, $8.60, $4.20, $2.40; CHRYSOSTOM, $5.60, $2.80; TELA, $2.20.

SURETY, taken in hand directly after the start and allowed to settle in his stride, went to his fore with a rush when reaching the final turn. Were Uncle Donald down and vigorously handled, just lasted long enough. CHRYSOSTOM, tired in the early racing, gained willingly when put to a drive, and was wearing the winner down at the stride. TELA, restrained close to the pace, was unable to seriously menace the first two under punishment. UNCLE DONALD, rated in front and saving ground, faltered in the final drive. ONE CHANCE had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 4:50. Winner, Mrs. H. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RISNEUR, $84.20, $32.40, $12.00; BUB McPARLAND, $6.00, $2.40; FOOTSURE, $2.80.

RISNEUR, squeezed back when BUB McPARLAND swerved out at the start, worked his way into contention on the outside when reaching the final turn, finished resolutely and was up in the last few yards. BUB McPARLAND, away with the break and caused some crowding, simproved his position while saving ground, reached the leaders and fought it out stoutly. FOOTSURE secured racing room on the inside to distance the leaders, but faltered inside the final furlong. LAST BID showed a good effort. BOUNDLESS DEEP suffered interference leaving the back field, came to the outside and finished with a rush. ROYAL DURBAR went evenly. PELHAM could not stay. DID SHE was done early.

Iowa's Attack Occupying Gophers

Minnesota Drills Defense for Tomorrow's Big Ten Feature Game.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 26 (AP).—Defensive drill to prepare for Iowa's attack, reputedly a fast one, took a principal part today in Minnesota's last stiff workout of the week before the homecoming game Saturday with the Hawkeyes.

Iowa Guards Players.

Iowa City, Iowa, Oct. 26 (AP).—Following light workout today, 33 University of Iowa football players were ready to leave for Minneapolis and their important Western Conference game with Minnesota Saturday.

With the squad at full strength for the first time since the opening game of the season, Coach Solem took no chances of injuries.

Small Wildcat Squad.

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 26 (AP).—One of the smallest Northwestern traveling squads ever selected by Coach Dick Hanley left for Columbus tonight for the big game Saturday against Ohio State. Only 32 Wildcats boarded Pullmans.

Chicago Has Smith Ready.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—A defensive dummy scrimmage against a freshman squad was the main part of the Chicago workout today. Coach Clark Shaughnessy indicated that Barton Smith probably will do most of the kicking Saturday against Michigan. He is not satisfied with the inconsistent kicking of Jay Berwanger.

Indiana Quits Scrimmage.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 26 (AP).—Scrimmage was abandoned at the Indiana University football drill today as coach Billy Hayes started to work on new offensive tactics. The first-string back field lined up with new faces, as Don Veller resumed his quarter back post, Adolph Sabik and Sam Manalan were the half backs, and Bob Jones, full back.

Injuries Hamper Michigan.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 26 (AP).—Thirty-three Michigan football players will leave here early tomorrow for the game with University of Chicago Saturday. Jack Heston, half back, and Ted Petaskey, end, regular starters who have slight injuries, may be kept on the bench Saturday.

Hike on Sealed Orders.

Sealed hiking orders, which are to be "carried out to the letter," promise the Keystone Troop a day of adventure on a date to be announced. Each patrol has its own packet of instructions, different from the other three. After meeting at a stated place, each patrol goes by a separate route to the same goal. The strays will be counted and "branded" for getting lost. Then there will be lunch, a few tests and games.

The hike is planned to combine the features of nature study, identifying along the way; signaling, taking messages from afar, which are later turned in and checked; cooking, in order to keep alive; exploring, and the explorers have only their orders to guide them; observation, the noting of prominent details on the route of travel and the keeping of one's eyes open, and games.

The trip is an interpatrol competition throughout the entire hike, to see who can follow orders most accurately.

The Keystone Troop is Troop 25, Bob Roberts, junior assistant scoutmaster. The patrol leaders are John Watson, Ben Dulany, Sven Langmack and Victor Burne, who will have charge of the hike.

Training Session.

Forty men organized into five patrols, meeting October 25 in the Scout leaders' training course at George Washington University, heard Virgil Howard, Troop 12 Scoutmaster, and William R. Keir, of Chicago, discuss Scout leadership.

Howard exhibited record forms for scribes' use, displayed the Troop 12 scribe book and demonstrated tenure records.

Keir spoke on the desirability of Scouts earning their uniforms and exhibited a film on the development of Scout spirit.

The next training course session will be held at 7:30 p. m., November 18, in Corcoran Hall.

At the court of honor and review held at Metropolitan Baptist Church October 21, the following advancements were made:

"Cap" Stubbs — Is That So!! — By Edwina

Walt Mason, Himself

Charlotte Corday.

She thought, brave Charlotte, when she slew the tyrant in his bath, the peace in France at last was due, and end to blood and wrath. The harsh disturber, base and vile, was dead and doubly canned; now she could perish with a smile, she'd saved her native land: No doubts were harbored in her breast; she knew her deed was great, and France at last would have a rest from murder, strife and hate. And so she went, as with a wreath, as stately as a queen, to place her lovely head beneath the crimson guillotine. A sea of sentimental tears we've shed because she died, so fair of face, so young in years, so noble in her pride. But she was fortunate to die before she had a chance to hear the last despairing cry of slaughtered hosts in France. She was in luck to lose her head while yet it held its dream that tyranny was prone and dead, misrule a futile scheme. If she had lived to hear and read the story of decay, she would have realized her deed was labor thrown away. There is perhaps in every life one triumphant hour, and as it goes, that hour seems rife with victory and power. And one is fortunate to die before that hour expires, to make his gesture fine and lie at last among his sires. For if he lives he's sure to see his visions in retreat, and what he thought was victory will loom up as defeat.

Illinois Holds Hart, Fugitive From Maryland

Life Term Convict Given Sentence for Cicero Shooting.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Jack Hart, escaped Maryland life-termer for murder, was convicted of assault to kill three Cicero men today and sentenced to 1 to 14 years in Illinois State Penitentiary.

Hart, also known as James "Red" Kelly, made no attempt to defend himself on the witness stand nor were any witnesses presented for him. The only gesture of the public defender was a closing argument in which he told the jury:

"Kelly must have been temporarily insane. There is no other explanation for his act."

Hart had drawn his pistol suddenly as three men approached his card table in a Cicero saloon last August and shot all three, wounding them not seriously. The State charged Hart was in fear of arrest and return to Maryland prison.

Hart refused to cooperate with his defender. Court attaches believed he preferred conviction on the minor charge to extradition.

It was expected Maryland authorities would file a stop order to prevent his release when Hart finishes his sentence or is paroled.

Police Matron Felled by Thief

Miss Casebeer Is Knocked Down, Saves Purse.

Knocked down by a colored man who attempted to snatch her pocketbook, Miss Effie Lois Casebeer, 38, police matron at the Woman's Bureau, was injured slightly early yesterday.

The policewoman, just relieved from duty at the bureau, Fifth and N streets northwest, was near her home, 1234 I street northwest, when the colored man leaped at her from a darkened doorway.

She screamed as he knocked her to the sidewalk, Miss Casebeer said, and the man fled.

The Bureau of Public Roads said yesterday employment under its construction program had increased nearly 300 per cent in October over the September level—from 30,088 men at work last month to 80,000 now, according to the Associated Press.

Radio Waves and Ripples

RUMORS of impending sale of the Amalgamated Broadcasting System to a powerful group of New York capitalists were circulating among Capital broadcasters yesterday on the heels of announcement of the resignation of Ed Wynn, Fire Chief comedian, as president.

In one radio quarter here the prediction was made the sale would go through within a week and the junior network would continue operations indefinitely as a serious competitor of the older chains. Definite information as to the name of the probable purchaser was withheld.

In another circle, Amalgamated was given 30 days in which to live. To the wise ones in this quarter the Wynn resignation meant just one thing—the Fire Chief, in the hole something like $250,000, has had all he wants of network operating.

The wise ones in the Amalgamated quarter, however, chose to speak convincingly of the possibility that either N. B. C. or Texaco, Fire Chief sponsor, has told Wynn he can't be funny on the red network at $7,500 a week and continue as head of a competing chain. Wynn is scheduled to begin a new Fire Chief series Tuesday.

To the Associated Press, Wynn explained he had been away and out of touch with network operation, thought it better to resign to devote more time to his N. B. C. program, that he was a showman and not a radio executive anyway.

Somehow this department can't quite shake off the notion that radio has become a thing one must forever live with, like cereal for breakfast.

It feels particularly that way when it opens its apartment window—the apartment has two windows, but one sticks—along about 9 or 10 o'clock at night.

We once saw graphs which showed just how far this business of buying radios has gone, especially among the people who can't afford them. It seems that when radios were pretty new and the down payments high—10 or 15 years ago—they were a rich man's plaything. Only about 13 per cent of the not-rich people had them, which made a sharp "V" graph. Now 37 per cent of the radios are owned by the not-rich people, 99 per cent of whom live in our apartment. Maybe it was 37 per cent of the not-rich people who owned radios. Anyway, the graph was a blunt "V."

Speaking of breakfast food reminds us that's what the Byrd Antarctic broadcasts are for, to sell more grapenuts. Grapenuts to you . . .

C. B. S. said yesterday it had General Foods signed up for 52 weeks of Byrd broadcasting to begin Saturday, November 18, at 10 a. m. sharp.

Accompanied by a Frank Black symphony, Egon Petri (left), interprets works of the masters in a second N. B. C. concert Sunday night. WMAL has scheduled him for 8 o'clock. With Roxy LaRocca and his ensemble on the A. B. S. chain Monday and Thursday nights is Movia Marinelli, torch singer.

John Watts, WOL announcer, is an example of what a thoughtful young man can do with a routine job.

John makes A. B. S.-WOL Station breaks, little else. A lot of announcers would simply say "Station WOL, 12:27½," then go to reading for another 15 minutes.

But not John. He has 12 different ways of saying the same thing all written out before him.

Three young men in N. B. C. studios here have finished practicing, have picked themselves a properly alliterative title and are ready to go ahead as a WMAL song show. They are Charles Luke, Cliff Yoemans and Announcer Robert Youse—the "Tune Time Trio." First shows tomorrow at 6:35 p. m., next Monday at 8:30 p. m.

Next on N. B. C.'s Cabinet series is War Secretary Dern, Monday night at 10:45 o'clock, "Planned Recovery." Secretaries Wallace, Roper and Perkins have selected November 6, 20 and 27, respectively, for their broadcasts.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt makes three addresses in behalf of the 1933 Mobilization for Human Needs campaign Monday and Tuesday, each time through an N. B. C. microphone. She will be introduced by Jane Addams at 2:30 p. m. Monday for speaking to delegates of the national conference of mobilization chairwomen in Chicago. Monday night she shares the microphone with Human Needs Chairman Newton D. Baker and Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, beginning at 10. Mrs. Roosevelt's third address will be delivered from the Court of States at the Century of Progress at 4:15 p. m. Tuesday.

WMAL would like to have the First Lady at the microphone for the Girl Scout broadcast Friday night, November 3, which would bring her N. B. C. radio total to 16.

N. B. C. has called off the Pittsburgh-Notre Dame broadcast, substituting Iowa-Minnesota at 2:45 p. m. tomorrow. Reason: Minnesota, 7, Pitt. 3; Iowa, 26, Wisconsin, 7. Tom Manning and Graham McNamee will go to New Haven for Yale-Army at 1:45 p. m. Columbia's Ted Husing is handling the same game.

Columbia had a couple of new shows on its mind yesterday—Tenor Milton Watson and Soprano Katherine Carrington doing a fresh Evening in Paris Series, with Claire Madjette, French singer, working as mistress of ceremonies, beginning November 8 at 8 p. m., and Mary Lee Taylor giving housewives cooking lessons for a canned mill company starting November 7 for Tuesdays and Thursdays at 11 a. m.

WJSV Sun Dialist Robert Trout has worked out an arrangement whereby the John Salb organ and a record may be played at the same time. He figures his annoyance value will increase at least threefold.

WJSV will start moving to its new quarters in the Earle Building tomorrow; will originate its last C. B. S. program—old age pension address—from the Shoreham studios Sunday night at 7:30 . . . WMAL's Rod and Stream broadcaster is going into game conservation for the winter . . . instead of talking about how to catch fish. Commissioner Frank Bell will tell how to conserve them, Wednesday, 5:15 p. m. . . . N. B. C. will pick up Alabama University President George Hutcheson Denny addressing the New York Society tonight at 6:30 . . . St. Mary's football coach, "Slip" Madigan, is on the All-American Show for C. B. S. tonight at 9:30 . . . Farmers Educational and Cooperative Union president, John A. Simpson, compares farm legislation passed by Congress in the special session with his organization's program at 12:30 p. m., tomorrow, N. B. C. . . . Columbia's H. V. Kaltenborn has the 6 p. m. spot tonight.
